Forced Labor Camps Hold 662,200.

The Russian prison camps herein described have long been the basis of charges against the soviet regime. So far it has been impossible to obtain an authentic description of the conditions prevailing in them. The soviet government in Moscow is to be asked for its comment on the substance of the allegations in this dispatch.

HELSINGFORS, Jan. 30. — More than 600,000 persons are at work in the soviet labor camps of the soviet union, according to a statement made today by a former high official of the ogpu [secret police] who fled from Russia last summer and was interned in a Finnish refugee camp. He is now in Helsingfors for questioning by the police.

The refugee asked that his name be kept secret, but said he had been head of the ogpu in the northern districts for seven years and had spent three years among convict camps while attached to the information department of the ogpu on Solovetski island, in the White sea. His duties took him to all parts of northern Russia and Karelia.

Divided into Eight Districts.

The former ogpu official said:

"The concentration camps for convicts in northern Russia are organized for special purposes under the official name of Severny Lageria Osobogo Naznatjenya, abbreviated to Slon, in cooperation between the ogpu and the big timber trusts. Abroad these camps are generally known as the Solovetski camps.

"There are eight district organizations, with local headquarters at Popof island, near Kem, at the stations of Majguba, Kantalahti and Idjo, all on the Murman railroad line; also on Solovetski island, in the White sea, and at Vichera. All these are in northern Russia, while the Orsk is near Almatar, in Russian Turkistan.

662,000 Prisoners Held.

"According to the official records, the number of prisoners on May 1, 1930, was 662,200, comprising 569,983 men, 73,285 women, and 18,932 young people between 13 and 17. At the time of my escape, on June 20 of last year, the prisoners were distributed in 373 groups in barracks having a total space of 470,162 cubic meters, equal to a breathing space of less than a cubic meter for each prisoner.

"The slon prisoners are employed at eight kinds of labor. One category does forest work, another log floating, a third building strategical highroads near the Finnish frontier, or railway lines, such as that from Bjely to the phosphate deposits at Hibensk and the Turkestan-Siberian line in central Asia. A fourth group does loading and discharging at ports on the Murman coast and at railway stations. A fifth category is doing draining and ditching work, a sixth is fishing, a seventh is building and the eighth comprises prisoners sold by the ogpu to the timber trusts to work in the sawmills.

72,000 Die in One Winter.

"The ogpu has undertaken to provide labor at a fixed rate of about 4½ rubles [$2.25] daily, and as this must feed and supervise the prisoners it is not surprising that the rations are inadequate.

"Last winter there were 72,000 casualties in the camps, many dying of exhaustion, typhoid and scurvy. The rest were killed by guards for attempted escape or inefficient work.

"Medical attendance at the camps is very inadequate. For 662,000 prisoners there are only four hospitals — on Solovetski island with 250 beds; on Popof island, 80 beds; at Kantalahti, 50 beds; at Majguba, 65 beds. Each camp is supposed to have a medical attendant, but most of the attendants have had no medical training. The lack of medicine is appalling, the medicine chests in the big camps containing only a few grains of iodine and a few ragged shirts for bandages.

Fed on Rotten Fish.

"The normal ration is one kilo [2⅕ pounds] of black bread daily. If a prisoner does not finish his daily task the ration is reduced till the deficit is made good. The daily food is soup, made from rotten fish. Old horse flesh is given once weekly. Because of the bad food most prisoners acquire night blindness. Many are shot because they are unable to see to keep to the forest paths at night. The usual report they tried to escape.

"Dead prisoners at forest work must

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—Important rôles were assigned today to eight of the principal actors in Washington's forthcoming international political drama, when Secretary of the Navy Adams announced the membership of the court martial board which will try Maj. Gen. Smedley Butler on charges of criticizing Benito Mussolini, the Italian premier.

John W. Davis, Democratic candidate for the presidency in 1924 and one of the nation's most noted lawyers, was offered another of the major parts late today, but up to tonight had not announced his acceptance. Mr. Davis is wanted by Gen. Butler to head the list of his civilian counsel.

Maj. Henry Leonard, retired marine officer, has been retained by Gen. Butler to aid in the legal effort to justify his action in portraying Premier Mussolini in the rôle of a hit and run driver who had ordered his chauffeur to drive on after a child had been crushed to death under the dictator's armored automobile.

Old Fighting Buddies.

Leonard and Butler are old comrades in arms. They served together in the Boxer uprising in China, and at Tientsin Butler's life was saved by Leonard during a battle. Leonard's left arm was shattered by gunfire as he rescued Butler.

The court as announced by Secretary Adams will consist of six rear admirals and one retired major general of marines as follows:

Capt. William C. Watts, chief of staff of the Fourth naval district, Philadelphia, was named as judge advocate of the court martial proceedings. His duties will parallel those of a prosecutor in a federal or civil court. Capt. Watts, a former judge advocate general of the navy, was government prosecutor in the court martial proceedings following the Shenandoah disaster.

Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune, retired, former commandant of the marine corps, is the only other marine officer besides Gen. Pendleton who is senior to Gen. Butler. No reason was given for not selecting Gen. Lejeune, a close friend of Butler.

Other developments of the day included an attack on the state department for apologizing to Italy by Senator Thomas Heflin [Dem., Ala.] on the senate floor; receipt of a note from Premier Mussolini stating he was satisfied with the apology given by Secretary of State Stimson yesterday for the Butler incident, and the disclosure of a growing feeling in the navy that the court martial of Gen. Butler was ordered as a means of more effectively gagging the utterances of navy officers. Existence of a growing apprehension in state department circles that an open airing of the Butler-Mussolini dispute will further complicate relations with Italy also made itself felt today.

Charges Due Today.

Rear Admiral David P. Sellers, judge advocate general of the navy, is expected to complete tomorrow the charges and specifications which will be entered against Butler.

Naval officers said today that the fiery marine officer whose conduct on the battlefield has won him twenty decorations, two of them the Medal of Honor, would probably be charged under section 22 of the navy regulations with "conduct to the prejudice of good order and discipline." If convicted he could be reprimanded, dismissed from the service, or given a prison sentence up to fifteen years. No one in naval circles anticipates any heavier punishment than a reprimand.

Who Ordered Court Martial?

Mystery today still surrounded the question of who was responsible for ordering Maj. Gen. Butler's court martial. Inquiry indicated that Secretary Adams had acted after being advised at the White House that the President

CATHOLIC SCHOOL GETS $250,000 OF RYAN FORTUNE

New York, Jan. 30.—[Special.]—The dispute between the fathers of the Blessed Sacrament of Lexington avenue and 76th street and the $125,000,000 estate of Thomas Fortune Ryan was settled today, when Surrogate James A. Foley approved an agreement whereby the fathers will receive $250,000 by Monday in lieu of all claims against the estate.

The fathers protested the intermediate accounting filed by Clendenin J. Ryan, son of the decedent, and executor of the estate, in which he refused to recognize their claim for $305,000 as the principal of a trust fund to yield a $12,000 annuity, and a $50,000 legacy under the will.

The fathers based their demand on an agreement made between them and Mr. Ryan in 1909, in which the millionaire obligated himself "in consideration of spiritual benefits to be perpetually received," to pay $12,000 a year to the order for the maintenance of the Mount Eymard seminary in Suffern, N. Y.

GUNNERS IN AUTO SHOOT MUTE AS HE LEAVES CLUB

Thomas Dudas, 23 years old, a deaf mute, was shot in the abdomen and probably fatally wounded last night as he stepped from the Heart Athletic club at 4249 South Honore street.

The shots were fired from the last of three slowly moving automobiles which passed Dudas in single file. Six bullets in all were fired before the cars sped away. Dudas had left the club to go to his home at 4434 Honore street and had just reached the corner, a few steps away, when the automobiles appeared, west bound in 44th street. He was taken to the county hospital.

According to New City police, the shooting might have been the result of a feud between the Heart club and some other neighborhood social organization. They based this theory on the fact that the mute was shot almost as he emerged from the club. The Heart club, the police said, bears a good reputation.

Warm and Dry January Sets a Record Here

Today will mark the close of the most remarkable January on record, from the standpoint of warmth and lack of precipitation, according to a statement made by the Chicago weather bureau last night.

January, 1931, it was explained, stands third in the all time record for warmth and also third in the all time record for scant precipitation, but never before, according to the weather bureau, has there been a January in which both such extremes were registered in the same month.

Today, according to W. P. Day, the government forecaster, will bring about little if any change in the averages compiled for the month so far, since the outlook for today is for mostly fair weather and slightly colder.

Mercury Rises to 49.

A shift in the wind from the south to the northwest at noon yesterday was the only thing that prevented an all-time high temperature record for Jan. 30. The mercury shot up from 37 degrees at 7 a. m. to 49 at noon, which was within one degree of the record of 50 degrees established in 1913, and brought predictions from the weather bureau that it would reach 52 in the afternoon, but the wind checked the rise, and at 7 p. m. the reading had dropped several degrees.

Farther west, however, records of 60 years' standing were broken. The temperature rose to 72 at Sheridan, Wyo., and 70 at Rapid City, S. D., and Miles City, Mont., while it was 64 in Sioux City, Ia. Downstate in Illinois peach trees were reported in bloom, while dandelions were flowering in Iowa.

Boys Play Baseball.

While the continued absence of rain brought no cheer to farmers, boys in the cities took full advantage of the springlike temperatures to play baseball in shirt sleeves, while ice skates were put away in favor of rollers.

C. A. Donnel, principal meteorologist of the weather bureau, explained the unusual weather as due to the absence of marked areas of high or low pressures. "These things occur spasmodically," he said, "and the zero waves just stay in the polar regions instead of passing down into the United States."

The average temperatures for this month have been but slightly below the normal temperatures for November and March, and provide a sharp contrast with January, 1930, which was the coldest in 30 years.

Mole Suns Itself; Caught.

Eau Claire, Wis., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—Although ground hog day is still some days away weather sharps here today decreed that spring is close at hand after learning that Roy M. Bortle of Eau Claire had captured a mole as it was out sunning itself on his lawn. The temperature soared close to 60 above here today.

WARNS OF PNEUMONIA

Pneumonia is on the increase in Chicago, Health Commissioner Kegel warned yesterday in a bulletin requesting the public to cooperate with the department to keep down the number of cases and deaths by applying remedial measures to colds, coughs, and minor respiratory diseases that can lead to pneumonia.

Figures in the health department records bore out Dr. Kegel's assertion. So far in January of this year there have been 379 deaths from pneumonia, an increase of 28 per cent over the 296 deaths from the same disease reported in all of January last year. The number of cases reported to the department has increased 66 per cent. There have been 1,160 cases for this month, compared to 696 cases in January, 1930.

The records showed also that the deaths from influenza have risen from 37 in January, 1930, to 59 for this month, while the number of cases reported to the department has increased from 53 to 597 for the same period.

Because of the lower proportion of deaths to cases this month as compared with January, 1930, Dr. Kegel said that the cases of influenza are mild in character.

Youth Ordered to Pay for Chopping Down Tree

William Cozen, 19 years old, 6530 South Damen avenue, hacked down one tree on the playgrounds of the O'Toole school, at 6552 South Seeley avenue, and was slashing away at another when he was caught. He told Judge Francis Allegretti in the Boys' court yesterday that he was making a clearing for a baseball game. Damage to the trees was estimated at $75 and the young wood chopper was ordered to pay $75 by April 23 or face a Bridewell term.

Leaves Lisbon Brazil Bound; 19 on Board

BULLETIN.

LISBON, Portugal, Jan. 30.—(AP)—The DO-X, giant German flying boat, will start at daybreak tomorrow, if all goes well, on the first leg of its experimental flight to South America with nineteen persons aboard, including a crew of thirteen.

The big plane will fly over the island of Madeira, dropping a bag of mail, and is due to reach Las Palmas, Canary islands, in the afternoon. There she will remain overnight while the motors are being checked and gasoline supplies taken aboard.

Hop to Cape Verde Islands.

The next day, weather permitting, the DO-X will hop to Porto Praia, Cape Verde islands, where a thirty-six hour halt will be made. The hardest part of the journey will follow, the jump from Porto Praia to the island of Fernando do Noronha, off the Brazilian coast. The distance is 1,230 miles. The plane will descend to the sea at night, finishing the hop the next day.

Clarence Schildhauer, American navigator and second pilot, expressed confidence the journey would be made safely.

"Our ship," he said, "was not built to fly day and night. It was designed to accomplish ten hours of consecutive flight. Therefore we shall only be in the air in the daytime, coming down to the sea each evening."

Plan to Fly to New York.

When the big flying boat reaches Rio de Janeiro, the nominal terminus of the attempt, he said, plans will be made to continue the flight to New York.

Capt. Friedrich Christiansen was spending the night aboard the DO-X tonight to guard against any last moment accident. He told the correspondent of the Associated Press that he planned to broadcast occasional reports during the voyage but the wireless would be used chiefly for the transmission and reception of weather and navigation reports.

Here Is Passenger List.

Stanislaus Krakau, personal representative of King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia, to whom he will make a report; Hans Kurt Stadthagen, manager of the Kondor air line at Bahia, Brazil; Maj. Giacomo Brenta of Italy; Admiral Gago Coutinho, Portuguese aviator; Fritz Hammer of the Kondor air line, and Lieut. Oliveira, representing Portuguese aviation, are the passengers booked.

Brenta, Krakau, and Stadthagen will disembark at Las Palmas. Lieut. Oliveira will leave the vessel at Porto Praia, and the others will continue on to Rio de Janeiro.

AVALANCHE KILLS 3 WOMEN, GUIDE IN SWITZERLAND

[Copyright: 1931: by the New York Times.]

GENEVA, Jan. 30.—Dorothy Furnivall, 23, a well known English tennis player, her mother, Mrs. Frank Furnivall, and a friend, Miss Leslie Galloway, together with their Swiss guide, Christian Bartschi, were swept away and killed by an avalanche on the famous Aletsch glacier in the Swiss Alps.

The remainder of their party, consisting of 2 men, one woman and 2 other guides, were rescued after a terrible ordeal of two nights and days in the open. They were rescued by a search party today and brought to safety. The survivors are Frank Furnivall, Miss Lees, a sister of Mrs. Furnivall, and Gilbert Stead, London business man.

The party of nine set out a week ago from Adelboden and went by train to Jungfrau. They reached their Concordia but safely, but a raging blizzard forced them to remain there until Tuesday. They then made a fresh start, and were out all night when Wednesday afternoon they reached the Aletsch forest. They were making their way in a line down the mountain slope just on the fringe of the forest when an avalanche came down, engulfing the whole party.

HOUSE REJECTS 25 MILLION FOOD BILL; WAR IS ON Senate Democrats Plan Filibuster.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—The controversy between President Hoover and the senate over relief proposals reached a crisis today.

The house again stood by the President. It rejected by substantial majorities several Democratic attempts to incorporate the senate's $25,000,000 relief appropriation in the interior department supply bill.

While the house was acting, the senate raised another point of contention by passing the war department measure with an amendment of Senator Capper's carrying authority to distribute 20,000,000 bushels of farm board wheat for relief purposes.

Democratic senators, following a party conference, issued a pronouncement declaring their intention to block the passage of appropriation bills unless their relief schemes are enacted into law.

Continuance of the house and senate at loggerheads and failure of either the President or his foes to make concessions means an extra session of the new congress in the spring.

Democratic Program.

Besides the $25,000,000 relief appropriation rejected today by the house, the senate Democrats demanded acceptance of the Caraway food loan bill, the Capper resolution for the use of 20 million bushels of farm board wheat for relief purposes, a provision for the use of $5,000,000 of the $45,000,000 seed, feed and fertilizer loan as capital stock of agricultural credit corporations, a $3,000,000 appropriation for rural sanitation, and reappropriation of seed, feed and fertilizer appropriations of last year for southeastern states. Most of these items are embraced in amendments to various appropriation bills.

Senator Joseph T. Robinson [Dem., Ark.], minority leader, announced the demands of the party conference in a formal statement and reiterated them on the floor of the senate.

Two Hour Battle in House.

The house engaged in a two hour debate on the $25,000,000 senate amendment to the interior department bill.

At the end of an acrimonious discussion centering around the Hoover administration, the members defeated a motion by Representative Edward T. Taylor [Dem., Colo.] for acceptance of the amendment with a provision for the distribution of the fund at the direction of the President, instead of by the Red Cross, which already has refused to accept it.

In a second roll call the house rejected by a vote of 149 to 212 a motion by Representative Joseph D. Byrns [Dem., Tenn.] for acceptance of the amendment with a clause authorizing the Red Cross to designate an agency to handle the distribution or, in the event of its failure either to administer the fund or designate another agency, authorizing the President to select an agency to assume charge of it.

Other Attempts Defeated.

The house by standing votes rejected other substitute proposals, including one to increase the appropriation to $50,000,000.

Finally, by a standing vote of 224 to 90, the house approved a motion by Representative L. C. Cramton [Rep., Mich.], in charge of the measure for the administration, to disagree to the senate amendment. This action was followed by appointment of house conferees to meet with senate conferees and adjust other differences in the bill.

In the vote on the Taylor motion only 21 Republicans deserted the administration, while six Democrats voted with the majority of the Republicans in opposition to it. The 21 Republicans included Browne, Cooper, Frear, Hull, Nelson, Peavey, and Schneider of Wisconsin, Denison of Illinois, Christgau and Pittenger of Minnesota, Campbell of Iowa, Sinclair of North Dakota, Sears of Nebraska, Craddock and Finley of Kentucky, Taylor of Tennessee, Garber and Stone of Oklahoma, Lambertson of Kansas, La Guardia of New York, and Zihlman of Maryland.

The six Democrats voting against the Taylor motion were Representatives Reilly of Wisconsin, Moorehead of Nebraska, Gavagan and Kennedy of New York, Tucker of Virginia, and Buchanan of Texas.

Red Cross Storm Center.

In the debate the administration defenders contended that the existence of the Red Cross as a voluntary organization is at stake through proposed governmental invasion of its field. The Democrats in urging that congress turn the fund over to President Hoover if the Red Cross will not handle it pointed to his broad experience in relief work. The tributes paid to the President as a relief administrator by the Democrats evoked sarcastic comments from the Republicans, who recalled that only recently the minority party members had been unwilling even to give him authority to shift emergency construction appropriations from one fund to another.

De Priest Gets Floor.

Representative Oscar De Priest [Rep., Ill.], sole Negro member of the house, joined in the debate on behalf of the administration.

"We take care of the poor and needy in Chicago through our own organizations," said Mr. De Priest. "I come from the poorest of the poor, and sympathize with the downtrodden. I represent more poor people than any other man in America represents. But I am against the establishment of the dole system in America."

Parliamentary maneuvers in the senate to block final enactment of the interior department appropriation bill will be the next stage in the controversy. The Democrats, led by Senator Robinson, will seek to prevent a conference agreement on the bill unless the house recedes from its opposition to the $25,000,000 fund, and, failing in that, are prepared to filibuster against the conference report.

Robinson Tells War Plans.

Senator Robinson, in enumerating results of the conference of Democratic senators, asserted that the interior department bill will be held up and that a proposed resolution to continue present appropriations for the department into the next fiscal year, with a view to avoiding a special session, also will be fought.

"This statement is made," he said, "in order that it may be well understood that the provisions referred to, or acceptable substitutes therefor, represent what in my judgment, and I believe in the judgment of many others, is the minimum of emergency measures, which in the opinion of their advocates are required by existing conditions in order to escape what many of us would like to avoid—an extra session."

TALK FINANCE INQUIRY

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—With the light of national sympathy turned upon Arkansas and the prospect that the national Red Cross will have to spend a million dollars to keep the people in this state from starvation, the state legislature is showing distinct signs of insurgency against the administration, which says they cannot spend any money to help their own people.

Their reaction to this bankrupt and pauper plea has been, first, to vote bonds for relief, knowing that in all probability the bonds cannot be sold, and in addition then turning the spotlight of investigation on highway, insurance and banking, and revenue departments, demanding to know where all the state money has gone and the destiny of all new appropriations.

Speaker Breaks Gavel.

"Calm down, calm down," was the repeated injunction of Speaker Irving C. Neale in the house today as the new members milled around under the stained glass dome and marble pillars of their chamber and got in each other's way, demanding the floor out of order and making proceedings somewhat difficult. The speaker had broken one gavel in trying to maintain order. He cracked another handle today.

The state highway appropriations of $46,251,250 for the biennium are being held up for five days pending an investigation. Representative Johnston protested today against methods being used to hurry this appropriation, against the threat that federal aid would be jeopardized.

"It is charged that members of the highway commission have gotten away with hundreds of thousands of dollars," he shouted. "The question is whether we want to give them more. We will not be driven into this."

Governor Asks Audit.

Gov. Harvey Parnell has asked for an audit of highway funds by disinterested parties.

A joint legislative committee, of which Senator Storm O. Whaley, a banker, is chairman, will begin an inquiry next Monday into the methods by which state funds were placed in various banks which have been closed since last fall, and the question of surety for these funds.

The state had $1,900,279 on deposit in various closed banks. It is the opinion of state officials that they will not lose more than $150,000 of the $1,900,279 of state money in these closed banks. A total of $684,779 was on deposit in the American Exchange Trust company, which failed. This was secured by surety of $760,000 in the Home Accident Insurance company, which has since failed.

In the meantime the list of families coming under support of the Red Cross is growing daily. On Wednesday it was 77,084. Yesterday it was 81,686. Averaging these families at five persons each, as the Red Cross does here and in Kentucky, this makes an increase of 22,160 persons in two days, a total of 408,430 today.

PERSHING PLEADS FOR DONATIONS TO RED CROSS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 30.—(AP)—A picture of American farmers in dire need as a result of widespread drought conditions was drawn tonight for a nation-wide audience by Gen. John J. Pershing in a plea for subscriptions to the Red Cross $10,000,000 fund.

"Some are existing largely on herbs, roots, nuts, and wild honey," he said. "The children . . . unless something is done for them, will have suffered most when the situation is over."

The total received up to tonight in the campaign was $4,475,983, and some 20,000 persons were added to those being fed. The total receiving aid is 731,211 persons in 701 counties.

Court Recognizes Woman as Clare Briggs' Widow

New York, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Marie C. Briggs, who claimed a common law marriage to Clare A. Briggs, cartoonist, is his lawful widow, the Appellate division of the Supreme court decided today. The decision upheld a decision of the Surrogates court. Marie C. Briggs asserted she became the common law wife of Briggs Aug. 1, 1929, at Sunbridge Farm in New Jersey. Her claims for a share in the estate were contested by Ruth Owen Briggs, who divorced the cartoonist on June 4, 1929,

DROUGHT REGION STATES FAIL TO VOTE SELF HELP

Relief Measures Pending in Some Cases.

In an effort to learn whether the various "drought" states were appropriating relief funds for their destitute THE TRIBUNE asked its correspondents at the state capitals to wire what if any measures were under consideration in the several legislatures now in session.

From the states thus afflicted with the effects of the drought and consequent penury and want the senators generally are pushing for an appropriation of $25,000,000 from the federal treasury and there arose an interest in how far the states themselves were moving for self-help as well as driving for aid from the nation.

In Washington yesterday the house rejected the senate's $25,000,000 relief appropriation amendment. Democrats were threatening to retaliate by forcing a special session unless the fund is voted.

Drought States Listed.

The states designated by the government as being in whole or in part the victims of last summer's unprecedented drought are:

Alabama	New Mexico
Arkansas	North Carolina
Georgia	Ohio
Illinois	Oklahoma
Indiana	Pennsylvania
Kentucky	Tennessee
Louisiana	Texas
Maryland	Virginia
Missouri	West Virginia
Montana

In such states as Pennsylvania, Maryland, Illinois, Indiana, and Missouri the drought area was limited distinctly to relatively small sections. In Kentucky and Virginia there are no legislative sessions this year.

Fail to Vote Money.

No state among the fifteen that have thus far reported in response to THE TRIBUNE'S inquiry has appropriated any money for the relief of its stricken and suffering people, though the pressure on congress to make such appropriations continues. In all of the stricken states the Red Cross continues through its local organizations to lend aid out of voluntary funds contributed by people throughout the nation.

Of the fifteen states reporting, twelve legislatures have made no move for appropriating money for their suffering citizens. A bill for $250,000 aid is pending in the Missouri legislature and one for $300,000 is pending in Oklahoma. The Arkansas house has passed a $15,000,000 bond issue bill and other relief bills have been introduced there.

Reports Made by States.

Tennessee, Alabama, Montana, Texas, North Carolina, Louisiana, Indiana, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Maryland and New Mexico report that no measures have been proposed for such relief, nor has Ohio moved toward self-help though the governor is reported to be considering the recommendation of an appropriation. Here are the state reports:

Tennessee Inactive.

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—The Tennessee legislature has made no move for state aid for the drought sufferers, or for the unemployment situation, except the free distribution of 500 carloads of coal being dug by state prisoners. Meanwhile in Washington the state's representatives are working for food appropriations from the national treasury.

The Red Cross, through local and national funds, is struggling to relieve distress in the state. In one county on the edge of Mississippi, where they have had four successive crop failures and landlords and tenants are equally broke, the national Red Cross is feeding 3,000 persons. Children are undernourished and cattle are starving in many sections.

Payment of taxes has been postponed until June, but that is the present extent of state relief and no one has introduced a bill calling for any special appropriation.

Sees Danger of Disease.

The share croppers and the Negroes who are going hungry and looking for help from some source are unorganized and inarticulate, and indifferent as to where the help comes from. Their voice is not heard in Nashville.

In Washington one of their representatives is appealing for national aid, calling attention to the danger here—peril of increase of disease through insufficient nourishment, which may end in pellagra, malaria, and tuberculosis.

Taxing bodies are all in debt and the people are unable to pay their taxes, while new ones are being proposed. Legislative bodies grow increasingly expensive. The Tennessee legislators during recess will nearly all be drawing pay on committees of investigation of some sort or another. They are allowed $16 a day for this work, and in this way make up for the $4 a day which is their salary as legislators. The investigations under way are likely to cost the state half a million dollars.

Arkansas Considers Bonds.

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—In this state, where nearly one-fourth of the population is being aided by the Red Cross and the farmers are asking for funds to put in the crops, the legislature has considered state relief legislation, but none has been enacted.

Despite a warning by bankers that more bonds could not be sold, and a warning by Gov. Parnell in his message that no new tax burden could be added, the house, by a vote of 77 to 14, passed a bill providing a $15,000,000 state bond issue for the relief of drought victims.

It has been predicted that the senate will kill the measure, or in the event that it passes that body, the governor will veto it.

Later, identical bills, providing for a $1,500,000 bond issue, guaranteed by a ½ mill tax levy, were introduced in the house and senate. It is proposed to set up a loan fund for farmers, working in conjunction with the federal intermediate credit bank plan.

Ohio Looks to Road Aid.

Columbus, O., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—The Ohio general assembly has adopted a bill to take advantage of the federal offer of aid in road building as a measure for relief of the unemployed and drought sufferers in Ohio. The state expects $6,500,000 in federal funds to match an equal amount voted by the legislature. The newly elected governor, George White, has asked county authorities and party leaders to meet him in conference to determine the extent of the needs.

Twenty-nine counties in Ohio have been allowed a portion of the federal emergency relief appropriation from the department of agriculture in Washington. There are 88 counties in Ohio. When the extent of the emergency is determined the Ohio government, according to Gov. White, is prepared to open the treasury of the state in the effort to care for the stricken farmers to the limit.

U. S. Loan Plan Approved.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—A bill to enable Pennsylvania farmers to take advantage of the drought relief fund provided by congress was presented in the Pennsylvania legislature this week by Senator Lanius of York county. Enabling legislation is needed here because Pennsylvania has no law providing for chattel mortgages on which the federal loans may be granted.

Pennsylvania's share of the federal drought fund is estimated at only $30,000 to $60,000 and will apply only to a few counties in the Cumberland valley. The Lanius bill is the only one presented here thus far.

Tax Payments Postponed.

Austin, Tex., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—No direct appropriation for the relief of the drought sufferers of Texas has yet been proposed in the legislature. It is understood that no recommendation that this be done will be made by Gov. Ross Sterling.

As a means of affording the farmers of the drought area, as well as all other property owners of the state, temporary financial relief, the legislature has passed a bill postponing the limit for the payment of all knds of ad valorem taxes from Feb. 1 to Oct. 15. Measures have also been proposed which will relieve all land from tax assessments and place this burden upon corporations.

Another indirect aid to the unemployed has just been given by the state highway commission in awarding approximately five million dollars of road construction contracts. Of the total of 254 counties in Texas only about thirty were seriously affected by last season's drought. Low prices for agricultural products, however, have caused general distress among farmers.

North Carolina Makes No Move.

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—Not more than six counties in North Carolina are likely to receive drought aid from the proposed federal fund of twenty-five millions asked of congress. The North Carolina general assembly has not appropriated anything toward any state relief for these counties and is not expected to, since it is concerned chiefly with trying to reduce taxes and various state appropriations, instead of increasing them. Only a handful of extreme northwestern counties were affected by the drought.

So far the general assembly has not been concerned with the federal drought relief bills and even less interested in any possible state relief measures.

Bill Pending in Missouri.

Jefferson City, Mo., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—A bill to appropriate $250,000 under the emergency clause of the state constitution for the relief of drought stricken people in probably 40 of the 144 counties of the state is pending in the Missouri legislature.

The first hearing upon the bill has been held before the senate committee an appropriations and a number of residents of the drought area have outlined the necessity for relief. The bill provides that the money shall be made available to the governer for distribution through local agencies in sections where aid is most needed. Whether this measure will pass the legislature is conjectural. Literally thousands of families in a large area of southeast and south central Missouri are in distress.

Oklahoma Has Relief Bills.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—Although the Oklahoma legislature has several measures in the hopper designed to provide some relief for the poverty stricken and drought sufferers in the state, the program of relief as now reflected in the bills pending is exceedingly limited.

One bill has passed the senate and has gone to the house which would provide $300,000 in cash to be distributed as emergency relief by relief groups. The amount of this bill was cut from $500,000 to the smaller figure.

Another bill would provide $300,000 to buy free garden and farm seed for farmers. This bill originally called for $400,000. It has passed the house.

An emergency measure providing a tax on salaries of state and county officers and employés and school teachers to raise a fund for relief work has passed the house, but is expected to meet resistance in the senate.

No Illinois Appropriations.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—Indications are that no bills making direct appropriations for drought relief will be offered at the present session of the Illinois general assembly.

However, a number of measures already have been introduced appropriating various amounts for road and public building, which are designed to give employment to persons in the forty counties designated in the federal drought survey.

When the drought proposition came to the attention of state officials an opinion was secured from the attorney general, who held that no direct appropriation can be made to the forty counties, but if money was voted out of the state treasury it would have to be for the benefit of the public in general and not to designated counties.

Indiana Relief Lacking.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—The 1931 legislature, although it has been in session three weeks, has actually done nothing to relieve unemployment or drought conditions.

Numerous bills are pending to cut taxes and government expenses. One bill has been introduced in the house to give communities and counties their share of the 4 cent state gasoline tax Feb. 1 instead of March 1 so that they may sooner begin county highway projects. One cent of the gasoline tax on each gallon returns to the county in which it was collected.

The state senate overwhelmingly adopted a resolution causing appointment of a committee to investigate what has been done by Gov. Harry G. Leslie's drought relief and unemployment commission. Considerable criticism was made of the administration's failure to do anything. The senate committee itself has held only two or three hearings and has reported nothing.

Maryland Is Optimistic.

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—Maryland farmers are not in need of any charity aid because of losses or setbacks due to drought conditions. With few exceptions they are able to take care of their own and are looking forward to better crops this year.

Gov. Ritchie in his inaugural address and message to the general assembly said that "in spite of drought and depression our future will be even more glorious than the past. In Maryland we think that the people should be free to work out their own problems." And the governor's friends declare he meant what he said to apply to every condition in Maryland and that the "Maryland free state can and will take care of its own."

Drought Commission Created.

Baton Rouge, La., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—Louisiana has made no appropriation for drought relief. The legislature created a drought commission and $5,000 was borrowed for administrative work, but there is no money available with which it can administer relief. One or two parishes in North Louisiana, notably Ouachita, through its police juries, have made appropriations for relief, and several parish school boards are furnishing lunch to undernourished school children in the drought area, but these are local efforts. The state itself has done nothing for drought relief, although Louisiana is spending eighty millions on road construction, and some relief, through employment, is given through this means.

Alabama Without Funds.

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—Alabama's treasury has a deficit of nearly twenty million dollars and no bills for relief of unemployment or the drought stricken area have been proposed. Investigations indicate no state legislation will be proposed during the present legislative sessions.

Gov. Miller, inaugurated a week ago, has discharged a score of state employés and announced that the state treasury is without funds. He has urged the legislature to stand with him in a rigid economy program.

All Alabama counties were included in the drought stricken area under the federal agricultural appropriation bill of forty-five million dollars, but no funds have been provided.

Red Cross and local relief agencies are attempting to meet the situation. Soup kitchens are being operated in industrial centers, but no provisions have been made for feeding the destitute in the rural areas.

Montana Is Inactive.

Helena, Mont., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—No action of any kind has been taken by the Montana legislature, now in session, nor is it probable that any action will be taken for the relief of the drought stricken in the state.

The need for such relief will not develop until seeding time. The legislature then will be adjourned. Reports from grain elevators in the principal wheat growing counties are to the effect that farmers are selling their seed grain to an extent never equaled in previous years. Sales are being made, not in anticipation of federal aid, but because bank credit has been virtually withdrawn and seed grain must be sold to provide food.

No Requests for Aid.

Santa Fe, N. M., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—The state government has received no requests for assistance to drought victims and the legislature has taken no steps to appropriate money.

DECIDE WANAMAKER INHERITANCE TAX CASE AGAINST U. S. BOARD

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 30.—(AP)—The federal Circuit Court of Appeals today upheld the ruling of the United States board of tax appeals that the estate of the late John Wanamaker does not have to pay a federal inheritance tax of $10,000,000 on the $40,000,000 which Wanamaker turned over to his son two years before he died.

The government contended that Wanamaker transferred most of his estate to his son, Rodman, in contemplation of death, and that an inheritance tax was thus collectible. It is expected the case will be taken to the Supreme court.

When the case was argued two weeks ago motion pictures were shown of Mr. Wanamaker to prove that he was active and vigorous and not thinking of death at the time he turned over the estate to his son.

BILL TO REFORM SALVATION ARMY SPLITS BOOTHS

LONDON, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Mrs. Florence Booth, widow of Gen. Bramwell Booth, and Commissioner Catherine Booth, their daughter, were among the signers of a petition against the Salvation Army bill, the second reading of which was postponed in the house of commons today for further study.

The bill would make the Salvation Army more democratic and take away from the leader much of the autocratic power held by the late Bramwell Booth. It is based on resolutions passed at a recent conference of commissioners here. All of the measures are advocated by Evangeline Booth, sister of Bramwell and the organization's leader in America.

"I am hoping something will happen," Catherine Booth said, "to finish the bill before it goes into committee. It will be a bad thing for the Army. If the bill can die a natural death before it reaches committee it will be all the better."

NEW YORK CITY IS GOING DRY! THAT'S OFFICIAL

New York, Jan. 30.—[Special.]—The supply of water serving New York City is the lowest in the twenty-eight years for which records are available, Commissioner John J. Dietz of the department of water supply, gas, and electricity announced today in calling upon the general public for cooperation in reducing the demand for water.

The present consumption demand in the city is 900,000,000 gallons daily, and on this basis Commissioner Dietz estimates that the present storage furnishes a supply that would, if unreplenished, be exhausted in approximately 130 days.

The drought has been so severe as to dry the Schoharie reservior and cut the water in the Ashokan reservoir to one-quarter of its capacity.

FORESEES BATTLE ON WICKERSHAM REPORT IN 1932

Loesch Says Revelations Will Ease Dry Law.

The Wickersham report on prohibition will become an important issue in the 1932 presidential campaign. The report, by exposing the unenforceability of the Volstead law in certain cases, will hasten modification of the 18th amendment.

Frank J. Loesch, Chicago member of the Wickersham commission, expressed the foregoing views yesterday in his first interview on the subject since President Hoover made public the report a fortnight ago. His remarks constituted an explanation and defense of the report itself, and an exposition of his personal views.

Denying that President Hoover or any one else had tried to influence the tone of the report, Mr. Loesch said he could see no essential discrepancy between the general conclusions of the commission, to which all but one of the eleven members subscribed, and the individual comments. Five members, including Mr. Loesch, advocated revision of the 18th amendment, two took a stand for repeal, and the remaining four favored further trial of prohibition.

Sees No Inconsistency.

"Granting that a majority of the commission favored a change of one sort or another, I can see no inconsistency in that same majority advocating a strengthening of the efforts at enforcement," said Mr. Loesch. "Dr. Amos W. W. Woodcock, the prohibition director, said he needed 500 additional men and the commission so recommended.

"The commission's attitude, as I see it, was that the national prohibition law is on the statute books, that it devolves upon the President and other executives to enforce it so long as it remains a law and that there is nothing repugnant in further determined efforts to enforce it until such time as it shall be changed by constitutional means."

Favors Anderson Plan.

Favoring revision himself, Mr. Loesch said he subscribed to the liquor disposing plan drawn up by his fellow commissioner, Henry W. Anderson. The Anderson plan, as Mr. Loesch views it, would solve the liquor problem just as the institution of the interstate commerce commission solved the problem of controlling the railroads twenty years ago.

"The Anderson plan is a modified form of the Swedish system of liquor control," said Mr. Loesch. "It contemplates appointment of a bipartisan commission having supervision over a privately owned corporation set up to handle the manufacture, transportation and sale of liquor. Liquor would be dispensed under the permit system now used in Sweden.

"The heart of the plan is the provision limiting the liquor corporation to 6 per cent profit. That provision takes the present enormous profits out of the liquor traffic. Eliminating these profits would deprive the gangsters of their principal source of revenue. Deprived of that revenue, the gangsters would cease to flourish and one important phase of the crime problem would be solved."

Opposes Return of Saloon.

Mr. Loesch believes the 18th amendment has made one important contribution to social welfare—the elimination of the open saloon. It was this consideration, he said, which influenced him to advocate modification instead of repeal.

"Industrialists and labor leaders agreed that repeal, permitting the return of the saloon, would be unthinkable in view of the chaos that would result to our present highly industrialized civilization, which is operating on a temperance basis," he said. "To repeal the amendment would bring back the saloon in every section having no state prohibition law. To give the workingman free access to liquor would destroy our industrial scheme."

Nevertheless, in Mr. Loesch's opinion, as much liquor is consumed now as before prohibition. While the commission was unable accurately to determine the quantity of illicit liquor in circulation, it found that 30,000,000 gallons of industrial alcohol was diverted annually to the bootleg trade and that the production of corn sugar, a basic ingredient of moonshine, had jumped from 121,000,000 to 910,000,000 pounds in the ten years of prohibition.

Find Menace to Youth.

"A bad feature of prohibition was our discovery that the young people are running wild over liquor," he said. "We had evidence on this situation from university educators, state police, and high school principals.

"Inevitably this report will lead to modification," Mr. Loesch declared. "It will be a textbook, so to speak, for the temperance advocates of the nation. Prior to enactment of the 18th amendment the prohibitionists and the temperance element worked hand in hand. They have long since come to the parting of the ways."

Foresees Battle on Wickersham Report in 1932

Frank J. Loesch, Chicago member of the commission headed by George W. Wickersham which investigated the possibility of enforcing the prohibition laws, is shown in some characteristic poses as he explains why the report will be an issue in 1932. Mr. Loesch holds that the report, by exposing the unenforceability of the law, will hasten the modification of the Volstead act and widen the split between the advocates of prohibition and those who favor temperance.

LA GUARDIA PLANS CHARGES AGAINST COAST GUARD CREW

Washington, D. C., Jan. 30.—(AP)—Serious charges are to be filed with coast guard headquarters against the crew of the patrol boat that seized the fishing schooner Good Luck off New York Monday night.

Representative F. H. La Guardia [Rep., N. Y.] made this announcement tonight after arranging for a conference tomorrow with Rear Admiral F. C. Billard, coast guard commandant. He said the Mid-Atlantic Fishing association had brought the matter to his attention.

The New Yorker termed the charges "serious, involving more than a violation of rules and regulations." He said the master of the schooner had been a fisherman for more than 20 years, and asserted "he is not a rum runner."

Reports received by La Guardia said that no liquor was found aboard the vessel, which was seized in the Narrows.

German Aerial Explorer, Mechanic Die in Crash

SANTIAGO, Chile, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Guenther Plueschow, German war flyer and aerial explorer, and his mechanic were killed when their airplane collapsed in the air and crashed at Natales, in Chilean territory. The two Germans were exploring unmapped Argentine and Chilean territory when the accident occurred.

OHIO EXECUTES TRIO THAT SLEW MAN IN HOLDUP

Colorado Hangs Three for Killing Deputy.

Columbus, O., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—Three prisoners were electrocuted in the Ohio penitentiary tonight for the murder of Ralph Wilcox, a gas station attendent in Galion, O., in June, 1930, in a holdup.

Fred Massa, 27; Earl Sites, 27, and Kenneth McCartney, 25, all of Mansfield, O., walked alone to their deaths in the dingy little electrocution chamber without ceremony.

The first to die was Sites, who entered the death cell at 7:34 p. m. McCartney followed. Massa was strapped into the electric chair at 7:53 p. m.

The electrocutions brought the total of such deaths in the Ohio penitentiary up to 154 since 1895 and were the second triple electrocution in the history of the institution.

Three Executed in Colorado.

Canon City, Colo., Jan. 30.—(AP)—Three men were executed at the state penitentiary here tonight for slaying a Colorado deputy sheriff during their flight from posses which pursued them from Kansas into Colorado following a bank holdup at Manter, Kas., in March, 1930.

Captured in 24 Hours.

Never boastful of their exploits after their capture near Jetmore, Kas., about twenty-four hours after the bank robbery, and apparently reconciled to their fate, the prisoners were reported to have gone to the gallows calmly.

The state law prohibits official announcement of the details of executions. Newspaper men were barred from the death chamber.

Warden Francis E. Crawford said the condemned men had been hanged between 8:46 p. m. and 9:57 p. m.

FARMER HANGS HIMSELF.

Plymouth, Ind., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—The body of Harry Thompson, 46, Plymouth farmer, was found hanging on his brother's farm today. Twenty dollars and a gold watch were on the body. Thompson had been missing since last Saturday.

FREE PUBLICITY IN PRESS HIT BY POSTAL OFFICIAL

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 30.—[Special.] Newspaper publishers who long have deplored the steady flood of advertising publicity which comes pouring in under the guise of news were warned against it today by an official of the postoffice department.

Speaking before the annual meeting of the New York Press association, made up of weekly newspaper men, William C. Wood, superintendent of the postal division of classifications at Washington, made it plain that the government was as hostile to the publicity wave as was the press.

Scoring the "adroitly prepared advertising matter" presented in a "news" form by "seekers of free publicity," Mr. Wood called attention to the statutory penalties against misuse of news channels for free advertising.

The government's reason, he said, was that use of such publicity meant loss of revenue because advertising matter must be mailed at special rates, higher than the straight second class rate provided for newspapers and periodicals.

Citing instances of the various devices to get publicity printed, he spoke of thinly disguised pressure brought to bear on newspapers to use the "news" matter in connection with display advertising.

Frequently, he said, this took the form of running advertising on the basis of a "spirit of coöperation" displayed by acceptance of publicity matter.

RACKET FIGHTERS INVITE UNION TO OUST RED BARKER

Prosecutors Send Ballots to 3,000 Members.

Invitations to attend a special meeting of the Chicago Coal Teamsters, Chauffeurs and Hikers' union, with the intention of ousting George [Red] Barker, business agent of the union, were mailed yesterday to 3,000 legitimate members of the union by the racket bureau of the state's attorney's office.

Barker is now in Joliet penitentiary serving out an unexpired sentence of one to ten years for larceny. He was sent back to prison recently by Chief Justice McGoorty of the Criminal court, who held that Barker's release by a Peoria judge on a habeas corpus writ was illegal.

Two Ballots Sent to Members.

Two ballots were sent to the members of the union by the racket bureau. Both ballots are to be marked "yes" or "no." The first presents the question of holding the meeting to oust Barker. The second ballot refers to the ousting of other officials of the union, who are alleged to have assumed control through intimidation. With the ballots was included a letter recalling the success of the racket bureau in ousting John [West Side Jack] Barry from control of the Newspaper Wagon Drivers' union.

"Red Barker," the letter said, "has been in control of your union for some time, and the funds of your union have been diverted, with the consent of present officials, for the defense of this notorious criminal. We do not feel that this is the will of the loyal members.

"If a majority of the members vote for the meeting to oust a man who never drove a coal wagon in his life, you will be notified of the place and time of the meeting and can vote without fear of intimidation."

Action Sought by Union Men.

"We have a petition from 100 members of the union asking us to take action," Donald Thompson, assistant state's attorney assigned to the case, said yesterday. "The meeting will be held under police protection, present officers will be barred from the meeting and the members may elect whomsoever they please to conduct their affairs. We will provide protection until such times as the new officials have matters in hand."

According to records seized recently by the racket bureau, the other officials on the union pay roll, whom the members may have a chance to oust, are: Milton Booth, president; William Husbans, secretary; Charles Reckett, recording secretary; and Al Weber, business agent.

Others who may lose positions paying from $250 to $500 a month, are John Sheridan Jr., Joseph A. Sagerstrom, Frank Casper, Milton Booth Jr., Paul Schnecht, Roy Younger, and Stanley Veneski.

Return "Unknown" Verdict in Eppie Moss Inquest

A coroner's jury yesterday concluded its investigation into the murder of Miss Eppie Moss, who was strangled to death Jan. 15 in a garage at 1143 Cornelia avenue, with a verdict that she was slain by a "person unknown."

BRUNKER MUST TELL HIS STORY TO GRAND JURY

Judge Orders Action on Boston Speech.

Albert R. Brunker, chairman of the civic safety committee, who visited Boston, asked for a police guard and then made a speech before the City club of that city attacking the Chicago judiciary and telling of statements he said were made to him by Al Capone, will be asked to produce evidence to support his charges.

A. R. BRUNKER.

Chief Justice John P. McGoorty of the Criminal court took exception to the reported speech of Brunker and announced that he will direct the grand jury to call on him for substantiation of his charges.

McGoorty Orders Action.

"I will direct the grand jury to issue a subpoena for Brunker and call on him to substantiate the statement he is reported to have made in his Boston address," said Judge McGoorty. "If he has any such evidence the public is entitled to know about it and if he hasn't the public is entitled to know that he was just making a speech.

"Chicago has suffered much from exaggerated and unwarranted statements regarding the integrity of its law enforcement officials.

"I know that the judiciary as a whole will welcome any evidence regarding the lack of integrity of any judge or other law enforcing official. It is now up to Brunker to prove his statements if he can."

The Boston Post says that Brunker declared in his speech that the men who shot to death seven members of the Buggs Moran gang in the so-called Valentine's day massacre were Chicago policemen.

Brunker also is quoted as saying that Capone has 6,000 city, state and federal officials on his pay roll, and that Capone had given him figures tending to show that the nation's liquor bill was $8,000,000,000 annually and that $6,000,000,000 of this sum goes to officials.

Gun Under His Pillow.

Judge McGoorty particularly took exception to Brunker's purported statement that 80 per cent of the judges in Chicago are criminals and that it was useless to attempt successful prosecution of gangsters in state courts.

Another statement was that the murderers of Alfred Lingle were being covered up and that "they could be found tomorrow" if the authorities wanted to do so.

"My answer to that is that I already have a man in the county jail indicted for the murder," said State's Attorney Swanson.

Brunker told his Boston audience, it was reported, that because of his activities he had to sleep with a loaded revolver under his pillow and a sawed off shotgun across his chest.

PLAN NATIONAL CONFERENCE HERE TO BATTLE CRIME

Ask Co-operation of Ten Largest Cities.

A movement for a national anti-crime conference in Chicago was announced yesterday by State's Attorney Swanson after he had received the idea in a long distance telephone call from District Attorney Buron Fitts of Los Angeles. Invitations to the law enforcing officials of the principal metropolitan centers throughout the country are expected to be mailed out within the next week, it was announced.

The purpose of the conference is to bring about a concentrated war on gangdom through the coöperation of all authorities in the principal cities. The plan is to call together the state's attorneys of the metropolitan centers, the chiefs of police, and the heads of the detective forces for an interchange of ideas on modern methods of crime suppression.

Big Cities Must Coöperate.

"Chicago's fight or New York's fight or Detroit's fight against metropolitan gangdom is also Los Angeles' fight," said Prosecutor Fitts. "Events have shown that gangs operate in an intercity and interstate manner and must be fought by coöperation."

The plan is to start by asking that the law enforcing officials of the ten main cities attend the conference, and if the request meets with favorable response then the invitations will be sent to others. It is hoped to bring together enough officials to establish a basis for a national organization which would hold annual meetings and give the various authorities an opportunity to exchange ideas which have met with success in their particular communities.

Because of the central location of Chicago it is the logical city in which to hold the first meeting, both Prosecutors Fitts and Swanson agreed.

HUNT BANK BANDITS

Detectives last night were seeking two Chicago gunmen who yesterday invaded the First State bank of Bensenville and escaped with $2,090. Bensenville is on Irving Park boulevard, 18 miles west of the city, in Du Page county.

The robbery was completed with unusual speed. Long before several officials who had stolen out of a rear entrance to sound an alarm could summon help the bandits were on their way toward Chicago. Police believe the robbers were from Chicago and ordered a search here.

W. A. Ernsting, vice president of the bank; A. W. Franzen, cashier; Fred Elfring, teller, and Miss Hazel Falvey, bookkeeper, were at their desks when the gunmen, neither more than 25 years old, entered. The vice president managed to slip out a rear door to summon help as the robbers flashed guns. In leaving he pressed a burglar alarm. The outlaws commanded Franzen to open a cage door, which he did. As they scooped up the money and still held him captive, Miss Falvey and Elfring escaped, also to call help. The bandits noticed this and did not wait to get more loot. They drove away in an automobile.

Slain Bandit Identified.

Positive identification of George Smith, who was found dead of a gunshot wound Thursday night, as one of the five bandits who staged the $19,200 Wieboldt store robbery was announced last night by Chief of Detectives John Norton.

Norton refused to divulge the name of the witness, but described her as a girl employé of the store who was standing near an elevator of the store during the holdup. The girl, he said, obtained a good view of the faces of the robbers.

Several other witnesses also viewed the body, but none could identify it positively, although several expressed opinions that there was a resemblance to one of the robbers. Plans to take Policeman William Binder, who was wounded by the bandits during the holdup, to view the body were not carried out, because of his condition. It was pointed out that Binder would be unable to identify any of the outlaws because his cap was pulled over his eyes at the outset of the robbery.

Called Pal of Niemoth.

Smith was pictured to police last night as a pal of Willie Niemoth, public enemy, who is now serving a sentence in a Maryland prison for a Baltimore robbery, and John Began, alias Jokes. Began is sought, police admitted, in connection with the Wieboldt holdup.

According to information being investigated by detectives, Smith was the leader of the bandit gang which attempted the daring daylight robbery of a money truck at the Merchandise Mart early this month.

Two robbers entered the men's furnishing goods store of Benjamin Nelson at 4640 South Ashland avenue yesterday and took $35 and four boxes of shirts.

Nick Evans, 26 years old, Negro, was arrested as a suspect in the robbery Friday night of Attorney and Mrs. Joseph H. Gilbert, 1525 Farwell avenue. He was armed. The Gilberts were robbed of $264 in cash and jewelry when a colored bandit held them up while they were parking their car in an alley near Jackson boulevard and State street.

Nathan Paley, owner of a drug store at 609 South California avenue, was robbed of $35 last night by three armed men who surprised him at work.

Dante Barone, 709 South Loomis street, owner of a drug store at 1361 West Harrison street, was robbed of $122 by two armed men.

Harold Hopem, 1031 Montana street, a former cowboy, was held up and robbed of his watch and $2 by two Negroes early this morning at Lake street and Ashland avenue. As the Negroes fled Hopem slashed one of them with a knife. Shortly afterward a wounded Negro, who gave his name as Roy Walker, 1580 West Lake street, appeared at Corbett's hospital, 1346 West Lake street, and was arrested. Hopem identified him.

LARGE REGISTRATION DUE TO CHANGING OF HOMES, EXPERT THINKS

The Chicago Homes Economic council is gradually winning its battle to establish year around renting with leases expiring every month instead of on May 1 and Oct. 1, L. L. Newton, executive secretary of the council, announced yesterday.

Challenging a supposition of certain politicians that few of the 173,313 voters registered on Jan. 27 for the mayoralty primary represented families with changed addresses, Mr. Newton produced a table indicating that many of the registrants might have been persons with new addresses. The table, showing the number of families moving in or out of unfurnished apartments in 1930, follows:

Jan.	20,159	May	37,690
Feb.	22,743	June	28,521
March	28,047	July	37,895
April	36,413	Aug.	31,488
Sept.	45,786
Oct.	34,310
Nov.	21,146
Dec.	12,083

"During October, November and December," Mr. Newton points out, "there were 73,715 families changing homes. If there were but two voters in each family the figures would mean that 147,430 voters changed residence between Oct. 1 and Jan. 1.

"The figures for January are not yet available but it is probable that 15,000 families moved during the first 26 days of the month up to registration day. Using the same estimate of two voters to a family, this would add 30,000 to the 147,300 voters that moved during the last three months and make a total of 177,000, or a larger number than that registered on Jan. 27."

BANDITS FORCE WOMEN INTO CAR; GET $10,000 LOOT

Two bandits last night robbed Mrs. Jane Anderson, 4834 Roscoe street, wife of an official of an automobile sales company, and Mrs. Robert S. Strauss, 3270 Sheridan road, wife of a loop broker, of furs and jewelry valued at $10,000 after forcing them into a car in front of the Anderson home as they were returning from a theater.

After forcing them into the car the bandits drove around the block stripping the women of their jewelry and furs, but not touching their purses. They were put out of the car in front of the Anderson home. Town Hall police were notified.

Mrs. Anderson lost a mink coat valued at $2,500. Mrs. Strauss lost a mink coat valued at $2,000, a white gold wrist watch set with dimonds, valued at $500, a white gold ring set with a four carat diamond and surrounded by 24 small diamonds and two sapphires, valued at $2,000; platinum diamond solitaire ring, valued at $1,000, and a white gold wedding band, set with 16 diamonds, valued at $2,000.

DENEEN MEETS COHORTS; DECIDE TO KEEP UP FIGHT

Lyle Promises Stronger Police Force.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Senator Deneen spoke at a closed meeting of his ward leaders and workers at the Morrison hotel yesterday afternoon. He supported the group's candidate, Ald. Arthur F. Albert, and while no vote was taken, the attitude of the gathering was said to have terminated any movement there may have been to persuade the alderman to retire from the mayoralty race.

Senator Deneen also criticized those backers of Judge Lyle who participated in the pre-campaign Palmer house elimination conferences that landed on the rocks. Deneen charged the other fellows with the responsibility for that failure to agree on an anti-city hall candidate just as forcibly as they have laid the blame for the failure on the senator.

As reporters were barred from the meeting their most authoritative information concerning what occurred there was gathered from a statement issued after it had been approved by Senator Deneen.

Words of Encouragement.

"The senator told his cohorts," ran this statement, "that they had the advantage of being in a large and enthusiastic organization which is working smoothly while the opposition is divided in two camps with the various leaders uncertain as to their campaign policies.

"Ald. Albert was called a real candidate with unquestioned honesty, character, intelligence and approved experience, and one who is fearless, vigorous and independent.

"Desertions of former Thompson leaders were termed an effort to prolong Thompsonism and to change labels and slogans without changing leaders.

Lyle's Record Criticized.

"Judge Lyle's failure to receive approval of the Municipal Voters' league at the close of his aldermanic term, and a similar failure to receive indorsement for reëlection from the Bar association after his term on the municipal bench were cited.

"The activities of Judge Lyle in fixing $100,000 bonds on vagrancy charges was called a publicity move and mention was made of the Supreme court's reduction of bond in one of Judge Lyle's cases to $5,000.

"Judge Lyle's candidacy was labeled that of a man seeking the honor of being elected mayor of Chicago on the sole platform of having required $100,000 bonds from vagrants.

"Ald. Albert spoke briefly to the workers, touching upon some of the high spots of his campaign speeches and promising further exposures of those active in the opposition camps.

Works on Organization.

In addition to speaking at eight meetings, Judge Lyle tried to find time during the day to complete the organization of the nonpolitical support that has been offered him by hundreds of letters and telegrams since he announced his candidacy. Much of his "spare time" was occupied with dictating to his secretary, Miss Louise Unger, requests that business and civic leaders who have offered their support accept places on his committee of business and professional men and women.

In an evening speech before the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Holy Cross hospital he said:

"There is nothing more important to Chicago than adequate protection of citizens' in their inalienable right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. It is the fundamental principle upon which our government is established.

"When crime is permitted to go unpunished and criminals are allowed to go about unafraid and unwhipped there is an increase in crime and a decided change in the nature of the offenses committed.

Promises Police Protection.

"The life and property of the citizen becomes increasingly unsafe in a community exposed to the depredations of gunmen, thieves, and cutthroats. I am not impressed with the claims of those who argue that other expenditures of the city government prevent it from setting aside sufficient funds for the maintenance of the police and fire departments.

"When I am mayor it will be my policy first to make proper provision for the adequate protection of life and property in this city and then provide for other important expenditures for other branches of municipal activity."

In other meetings Judge Lyle set forth other phases of his views on municipal financing.

"As the individual business man is retrenching in these days of depression," he said, "so it is incumbent on our municipal officials to do likewise.

"I will institute rigid economy in every department of our municipal government as the only way in which we can meet this situation."

Lyle headquarters made public an indorsement of the judge by the 41st Ward Republican organization, whose letterheads describe it as the "Emmerson group." Charles J. McGowan is president, John J. Dedic, chairman, and Robert S. Bremner, secretary. The resolutions adopted described Judge Lyle as the only Republican candidate who has a chance of being elected and "whose record justifies the conclusion that he can successfully combat the criminal forces."

In the Forty-third ward where the regular committeeman, Charles Burmeister, is nominally with Thompson the Lyle banner has been raised over headquarters at 723 West North avenue. This is the home ward of Ald Albert and Edward R. Litsinger. Four years ago one of the strong supporters of Albert was John Alger, who now is in charge of the Lyle headquarters.

FIRST WIFE GETS FLYER WHO WED PRISCILLA DEAN

Court Denies Second Suit for Divorce.

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 30.—(AP)—Leslie P. Arnold, former army around the world flyer, was denied a divorce from Mildred Avery Arnold in Maricopa county Superior court tonight.

The former war nurse who succeeded more than a year ago in having a previous decree obtained by Arnold reversed by the Georgia Supreme court, won a three day battle of depositions to maintain her claim of wifehood over that of Priscilla Dean, motion picture actress, whom Arnold married at Agua Caliente, Mexico.

Denies Misconduct.

She denied in person Arnold's allegations of misconduct and infidelity and countered the aviator's depositions with disavowal of acquaintance with some of the deponents and character depositions of her own, from her mother and New England friends.

"There are no grounds for divorce," Superior Judge J. C. Niles announced briefly. He delayed his decision, he explained, until he had settled a question of jurisdiction presented in a motion of Mrs. Arnold's counsel.

He ruled the court was legally empowered to base its findings on testimony produced before it.

"Loves and Wants Him."

Mrs. Arnold expressed satisfaction with the outcome and disavowed any intention of breaking up Arnold's marriage with Miss Dean for the mere purpose of so doing.

"I love him," she said, "and want him myself."

Arnold and Miss Dean received word of the Georgia Supreme court action after they returned from a honeymoon in Mexico. They immediately separated with the assertion they would remarry when they legally could do so.

ELMHURST FLYER INJURED IN CRASH AT LOS ANGELES

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—Crashing into a power line at the edge of an open field tonight, a Stinson cabin monoplane sideslipped to the ground, resulting in the serious injury of John Parkhouse and slight injuries to Edgar E. Brazelton, pilot and owner of the plane, of Elmhurst, Ill.; his brother, Bert Brazelton, and an unidentified young woman. The latter three were bruised and left the scene of the wreck before police arrived.

Pilots said Brazelton circled several airports and floodlights were turned on so he could land but that he evidently misjudged his altitude by about 300 feet and struck the power line, swinging his ship around so that it lit sideways and slid along the ground 200 feet.

The party was returning from Agua Caliente, Mexico. The Brazeltons flew the plane here from Chicago eight days ago.

Edgar E. Brazelton lives at 200 South Kenilworth avenue, Elmhurst, and for years has been a flying enthusiast. He is general representative of a Philadelphia stove appliance concern. He uses his Stinson plane for both business and pleasure. Last Monday Brazelton, his wife, Hazel, and their three children, ranging in age from 4 to 8 years old, flew to Los Angeles on a business trip. It is supposed the woman injured with him in Los Angeles was Mrs. Brazelton. He has been a licensed pilot for two years. He is noted as a sportsman and is reputed wealthy.

EROS GIVES US A SAUCY WINK, SPEEDS AWAY

But to Astronomers His Visit Is Important.

Little Eros turned his pale yellow face towards the earth last night and winked a couple of times. Today this erratic namesake of the Greek god of love has turned his back on the world and is speeding out into the reaches of space towards the limits of our solar system. And he won't visit us again for 45 years.

Eros is an insignificant little mite, as heavenly bodies go, because his face isn't much bigger than the city of Chicago, and if he gave off five times the reflected light that he does, he would be barely visible to our unaided eyes, according to Edwin B. Frost of Yerkes observatory.

Little, but Important.

But, Prof. Frost explained, he is important to astronomers because Eros, in his earthly visit, gives men of science new data for computation of solar weights and distances, and the distance between the earth and the sun is used by these men of science as a sort of a celestial measuring rod.

Eros, the scientists explain, has an elliptical orbit which is very much elongated. That is, his path is a very flat oval, one end of which is almost as close to the sun as the earth is, while the other end is 260,000,000 miles out in space.

Last night Eros reached the end of the oval that is close to the sun, and it happened that the earth, in its movement around the sun, was close to this sharp curve in Eros' path.

Only 16,000,000 Miles Away.

This brought Eros to within 16,000,000 miles of the earth, closer than any other planetary body—not counting the moon—and that was what made it a big night for the astronomers. The results of their computations, however, won't be known for some time, because they will be studying for weeks over microscopic distances on photographic plates, figuring out involved mathematical problems based on these distances.

These computations may result in the correction of a few hundred or a few thousand miles in the 92,000,000 or so miles between the earth and the sun, and this is important—to astronomers.

Eros has about 1,100 companion planetoids, but none of them do just the same things that Eros does. For instance, Prof. Frost says, Eros gives us a pale yellow wink about once every five hours, showing that he has revolved once on his axis in that time.

Clouds obscured the visibility from Dearborn observatory at Northwestern university last night, but Prof. Oliver Lee said that observations would be continued tonight, while Eros is still close enough to make the observations of scientific value.

REALTY DEALER HELD AS AUTO RUNS DOWN BOYS

One Killed and One Hurt; Caught After Chase.

Otto Rueter, a real estate operator living in Flossmoor, was held without bail by the Blue Island police last night after his automobile struck and killed Theodore Kicmal, 11 years old, 14430 Palmer avenue, Posen. Rueter tried to escape after running down the boy, police said, but was captured at 150th street and Western avenue. Dixmoor, nine blocks from the scene of the accident.

OTTO RUETER.

THEODORE KICMAL.

According to the police, the victim, his brother, Leo, 9 years old, and John Labuz, 10 years old, 14446 Campbell avenue, Posen, had been gathering coal along the railroad tracks. They were pulling a small wagon loaded with coal across Western avenue at 141st street when an automobile traveling at a high rate of speed, witnesses said, crashed into them.

One Killed, One Hurt.

Theodore was killed instantly and Leo was seriously injured. The other boy escaped unhurt. A few seconds later John Kicmal, 20 years old, another brother, drove by in his car. He started after the hit and run driver and was joined in the chase by Policeman Elbert Byers of Dixmoor.

At 150th street and Western avenue they overtook Rueter, who was sitting in his car parked at the side of the street. The radiator of his car was smashed and the water had drained out, causing the engine to stall.

At the Blue Island police station Rueter declared that he did not know he had struck anybody. Rueter is engaged in the subdivision business and has offices at 103d street and Western avenue.

Auto Crashes Into Train.

Phillip J. Tuohy, 25 years old, of 220 South Austin boulevard, Oak Park, and William Kelley, 24, of 1608 South 18th avenue, Maywood, were probably fatally injured late last night when the automobile in which they were riding, and driven by Tuohy, was struck by a westbound express freight train of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad at Central avenue and Harrison street.

Witnesses told the police the crossing gates had been lowered and the train was in sight when Tuohy's machine, going at a high speed, approached. Tuohy's car crashed through the closed gate and was struck by the locomotive. The machine was demolished and the wreckage was carried nearly a block. The injured men were taken to Frances Willard hospital.

Toll Passes 100 Mark.

The death of the Kicmal boy and one other increased Cook county's motor toll for the year to 101.

A. C. Ronschke, 74 years old, 6413 Ingleside avenue, died at the Illinois Central hospital a few hours after being struck by a car while crossing the outer drive at 63d street in Jackson park. The driver of the car was Edward Breitenbach, 7427 South Shore drive.

A coroner's jury yesterday returned a verdict of accidental death at the inquest into the deaths of nine persons who were killed when the small sedan in which they were riding was struck by a Grand Trunk train in Harvey on Jan. 1. The dead were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Nowak, 2232 West 18th street, and their two children, and Mr. and Mrs. Mathussalen Olasen and their three children.

U. S. OFFICERS HUNT BERGDOLL IN LOS ANGELES

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 30.—(AP)—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, wealthy world war draft evader, was being sought here today by federal agents.

Bergdoll, who had been in Germany since his flight from Philadelphia, was reported to have returned to join former Philadelphia friends now living in southern California. Vincent Mangerina, deputy U. S. marshal, said a man answering the draft evader's description slipped from a train at a suburban town near here yesterday. Department of justice agents were instructed to watch trains here, at Phoenix, El Paso, Ogden, and other western cities.

6 Aurora Saloons Raided by U. S.; 7 Arrests Made

Deputy Prohibition Administrator Arthur E. Hamilton led twenty of his dry raiders on an expedition to Aurora yesterday, capturing seven men in six saloons. Those under arrest are Henry Schomer, Elmer Otterpohl, Lawrence Johnson, Jack McGuire, W. J. Van Kirk, Ted Weber, and Floyd Greenman. The home of Tom Beatty and the saloon of Matt Beringer, both of Batavia, were raided, both men being arrested.

Mussolini Cables He Is Satisfied.

desired proper action to be taken. Immediately after the Italian embassy protested about the Butler speech, the state department called upon the navy for an explanation. The matter was discussed at Tuesday's cabinet meeting. Later Butler admitted telling the story about Mussolini as a hit and run driver, but declined to name the friend who had told him the incident. Secretary Adams then called in his advisers and announced Maj. Gen. Butler was to be court martialed. The marine officer's arrest followed and the state department apologized to Italy.

More Complications Ahead.

Although Premier Mussolini, in his note, said he was satisfied the incident had been closed by the Stimson apology, there were indications today that further complications would arise should counsel for Maj. Gen. Butler introduce witnesses to prove the truth of the story he told at Philadelphia. There were repeated predictions today that before the incident was closed it will provide colorful developments which may prove embarrassing to the state department. Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr. has been named by a number of men all over the country as having told the "hit and run" story about Mussolini in their presence and the presence of Gen. Butler. Vanderbilt has refused to comment.

Maj. Gen. Butler has a right to demand that the trial be open and intends to make such a demand. The court martial board can recommend, however, that the court be closed.

Mussolini's Note.

"Rome, Jan. 30, 1931, 2 P. M.

"His Excellency De Martino, Royal Italian Ambassador, Washington:

"I felt sure that I would obtain just and prompt redress from the fairness, the loyalty and the friendship of the American government and the American people, whose respect for the truth is well known to me.

"Will you please communicate to the federal government that I consider closed the incident, which for my part I have already forgotten.

"MUSSOLINI."

Senator Heflin in his speech attacked Premier Mussolini and defended Gen. Butler. He was listened to in silence by his colleagues.

He said the story of killing the child "sounds exactly like Mussolini."

"I stood here three years ago," he continued, "and related stories of Italian Masons being murdered at the instance of Mussolini. There were 137 of them in one night, if I remember correctly.

"Why should any American general bow down and crawl in the dust to the most red handed tyrant on earth—Mussolini—the monarch of the old world?" he asked.

He demanded that before Gen. Butler was court martialed an investigation should determine the truth of his story about the Italian dictator.

It Was a Dog, Rome Says.

ROME, Jan. 30.—(AP)—The only automobile accident Premier Mussolini has ever had was years ago, when he ran over a dog, officials at the foreign office said tonight in commenting on the speech by Gen. Smedley D. Butler in which the American Marine made remarks derogatory to the Duce.

He never went driving with any American, the officials said, and he never met Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr., who has been described as the source of Gen. Butler's remarks.

The Giornale d'Italia said, "We note with lively pleasure the prompt and full satisfaction which the government of the United States gave to Italy's just protest. Its action gives ample proof of that country's friendship and loyalty to Italy, and indicates the prestige which the new Italy of Mussolini has acquired beyond the sea.

"Now that the incident is closed we believe Italo-American friendship is stronger than ever."

Capone Ally Taken to U. S. Prison for Year and a Day

Charles Argento, alleged leader of a gang of Sicilians affiliated with Al Capone's alcohol syndicate, left last night for Leavenworth penitentiary to serve a year and a day on a federal conviction of conspiracy to violate the dry law. He was taken to prison along with ten other miscellaneous convicts in custody of Deputy Federal Marshal Joseph Spissirri. Argento was a partner in the Italian Importing and Manufacturing Co., 521 West 26th street, which supplied corn sugar for stills in Chicago, Cicero and Racine.

ALABAMA'S SENATE CONDEMNS HEFLIN'S ELECTION PROTEST

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 30.—(AP)—The Alabama senate today adopted without a dissenting vote the house resolution "in condemnation of the very poor sportsmanship" of Senator J. Thomas Heflin in contesting the election of last November in which he was defeated.

When the resolution was adopted, Senator Hooten of Chambers county moved for suspension of the rules and immediate passage. In making the motion Senator Hooten said, "I owe it to the Democrats and my constituents in Chambers county, which is the home of Senator Heflin, to ask suspension of the rules and immediate adoption."

The resolution was adopted by the house yesterday by a vote of 91 to 3.

SAY GRAFT WAS RULE OF RIVER CUSTOMS FORCE

Convicted Detroit Men Give Details.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 30.—[Special:]—Twelve convicted customs border patrolmen today told amazing stories of graft and corruption among officials on the Detroit river as they were being started to the United States penitentiary in Leavenworth, Kas., to serve twenty months.

Bribes as high as $1,500 a week; diversion of seized liquor, for use by superior officers; a lieutenant shot by his own men "because he was honest"; a parade of rum boats which mockingly followed a boat load of high customs officials who were touring the river, all were described in detail.

Honest, Dies Poor.

One of their comrades, the racketeering officers frankly said, "stayed honest," and died a poor man. They raised money to bury him.

Howard Baker, 27, one of the convicted men, told of accepting $20,000 in bribes during twenty-three months in the patrol. Discharged, he said, for "lack of experience," he became associated with a down river bootlegger as "payoff" man to the patrol.

"If we paid $1,500, for the 'go' signal on a load," he said, "each of the patrolmen got $500. The other $500 was for the sergeant."

Found Superior Drinking.

Charles V. Basile, another convicted officer, told of collecting $6,000 during eight months on the river. "I was one of the strictest inspectors for three months," he said. "Then I caught my commanding officer drinking some seized liquor. Honest officers who reported irregularities disappeared from the force. Lieut. Louis Monroe reported nine inspectors who were accepting bribes from a big down river runner, and soon after that he was called to the patrol base. Monroe died penniless.

"Linus von Batchelder, another honest lieutenant, was asked to resign. He was followed by Lieut. Louis Rudd. Rudd was unpopular with the men and was fired on twice by his own details."

CHICAGOAN, WAR VET.

Charles V. Basile's parents live at 822 Washtenaw avenue. His mother said last night that he left Chicago a little more than a year ago, and that he was a veteran of the world war.

fell and strip thirty-five logs daily. They must start in the early morning while it is dark and often walk two miles to find the trees for felling. An additional task imposed by the zealous ogpu is the felling and barking of nine logs under the "socialistic efficiency competition."

"Under the rules of this competition the ogpu agents in the various camps undertake to increase the official timber felling program by an additional 25 per cent to show their patriotic fervor. This means the unfortunate prisoner is forced to oblige his taskmaster by doing extra duty, devoid of all sense in its cruelty. Only by exerting their strength to the utmost can the prisoners walk back to the barracks. While standing in line waiting for the execrable soup a man often sleeps with his head resting on the shoulders of the next prisoner.

14,875 Without Clothes.

"According to the official reports, there were on May 1, 1930, 14,875 prisoners "without clothes," which means they had only dirty, ragged underclothing. As soon as the shortage of clothes became known the ogpu issued a decree ordering prisoners returning from the forests to hand over their clothes to others to enable them to go out to work. Prisoners returning to the barracks, dead tired and often wet through, must strip and give their clothes to the next batch, which is immediately sent out.

"Prisoners who by sheer luck survive their imprisonment are not allowed to return home. They are compelled to remain three more years in Karelia or the northern district as colonists."

500 Police Department Rookies Complete Drill

The training of 250 recruits to the police force was completed yesterday with two lectures to the group assembled at the police building at 11th and State streets. In speeches to the men Acting Police Commissioner Alcock advised them of the rules and regulations of the department, and Harry Olson, former chief justice of the Municipal court, instructed them in the rules of evidence and other aspects of the law. The new men will be assigned to active patrol duty in uniform as probationary policemen on Monday.

Montreal, Que., Jan. 30.—In an effort to stem the tide of holdups with violence that has swept the city for some months past, Judge Marin this morning sentenced Bernard Boom to twenty years in the penitentiary and twenty strokes of the lash. Boom, a United States gangster, held up a cigar store here, obtaining $675. The judge ordered Boom's deportation to the United States on completion of the sentence.

POLICE JURORS' PLEA FOR FUNDS MEETS SETBACK

County Refers Request to Budget Committee.

The special grand jury investigation into police department conditions throughout the county, which has been in progress for several weeks, received a setback yesterday when the request for a $50,000 emergency appropriation to employ investigators for the jury was referred to the budget committee by the finance committee of the county board.

It was pointed out that even if the fund is allowed and placed in the budget several weeks may elapse before the money would be available for use to Assistant State's Attorneys Charles J. Mueller and Charles Lounsbury, who are in charge of the investigation.

Grand Jurors May Act.

Indications were that when the jury meets again Monday after an adjournment of one week the jurors and the prosecutors may decide that the time has come to make a public statement as to why no progress is being made. The investigation was ordered by Chief Justice John P. McGoorty of the Criminal court after three successive grand juries had recommended the inquiry.

"I cannot say anything at this time," said Prosecutor Mueller. "I want to find out just what the situation is regarding the appropriation and report on Monday to the jurors."

It became known yesterday that several of the jurors have visited the prosecutors' loop office in the last week and have expressed dissatisfaction over the investigation thus far. These jurors made it plain, according to reports, that they thought the assistant prosecutors working on the inquiry were doing all that is possible with limited cooperation and lack of money.

The need for a special grand jury investigation of important public matters was called to attention yesterday by the regular January grand jury in its final report to the chief justice.

"It is the experience of this grand jury," the report said, "that any regular Cook county grand jury that is burdened with 600 cases or more in a month's service has very little opportunity to devote its attention to matters of investigation which demand the expenditure of an appreciable amount of time."

The regular jurors indorsed the recommendations of the judicial advisory council that the legislature pass a law giving the municipal courts more jurisdiction in disposing of cases of larceny, confidence game and embezzlement, so as to take some of the burden from grand juries.

Stronger Gun Law Urged.

"The grand jury also indorses the suggestion of changes in the state law which would make it unlawful to carry a concealed weapon in an automobile, even though the weapon be out of reach of the owner," was another paragraph in the report of the regular grand jury.

The establishment of a central bail bond bureau as recommended by past grand juries and the more widespread use of the police radio system were other recommendations. A suggestion for the organization of a permanent grand jurors' association such as exists in New York was also contained in the report.

BRANDEIS HINTS MINNESOTA'S GAG LAW IS INVALID

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—"It is difficult to see how one is to have a free press and the protection it affords a democratic community without the privilege this act seems to limit."

JUSTICE LOUIS D. BRANDEIS.

The case before the Supreme court of the United States was the so called "Minnesota gag law case." More properly designated it was the appeal of J. M. Near from a ruling of the Minnesota Supreme court, which upheld an injunction issued in 1927 against the Saturday Press, a small paper, formerly published in Minneapolis by Near and Howard A. Guilford.

Enjoined by Minnesota Court.

The injunction was issued under a Minnesota law which provides that any person engaged in the business of regularly or customarily producing a periodical which is "malicious, scandalous, and defamatory" is guilty of a nuisance and may be enjoined without jury trial.

Weymouth Kirkland, assisted by Howard Ellis and Edward C. Caldwell, the three attorneys engaged by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, together with Thomas E. Latimer of Minneapolis, represented Near. The state of Minnesota was represented by Deputy Attorney General James E. Markham and William C. Larson and Arthur L. Markve, assistant county attorneys.

The attorneys were making their final arguments and it was while Mr. Markham was arguing the state's side of the case that Justice Brandeis interrupted. Members of the court, including Chief Justice Hughes, had been catechizing both attorneys at frequent intervals.

Brandeis Refers to Record.

Justice Brandeis referred to the record in which appeared the text of the Saturday Press issues on which the case is based.

"In these articles," said Justice Brandeis, "the editors state that they seek to expose combinations between criminals and public officials in conducting and profiting from gambling halls. They name the chief of police and other officials. They state that they have been threatened with being, to use their words, 'bumped off.' They state that shortly after commencing publication, Guilford was set upon by thugs and shot in the abdomen.

"We do not know whether these allegations are true or false, but we do know that just such criminal combinations exist to the shame of some of our cities.

Insist Exposé Is Privileged.

"What these men did seems like an effort to expose such a combination. Now, is that not a privileged communication if there ever was one? How else can a community secure protection from that sort of thing if people are not allowed to engage in free discussion of such matters?

"Of course there was a defamation. You can not disclose evil without defaming the doers of evil. It is difficult to see how one is to have a free press and the protection it affords a democratic community without the privilege this act seeks to limit. You are dealing here, not with the sort of scandal too often appearing in the press and which ought not to appeal to the interest of any one, but with a matter of prime interest to every American citizen.

"What sort of matter could be more privileged?

"Assuming it to be true," Mr. Markham interposed.

Campaign to Rout Evil.

"No," Justice Brandeis answered. "A newspaper can not always wait until it gets the judgment of a court. These men set out on a campaign to rid the city of certain evils."

"So they say," Mr. Markham interposed again.

"Yes, of course, so they say," Justice Brandeis admitted. "They went forward with a definite program, and certainly they acted with great courage. They invited suit for criminal libel if what they said was not true. Now, if that campaign was not privileged—if that is not one of the things for which the press chiefly exist, then for what does it exist?

"As for such defamatory matter being issued regularly or customarily, how can such a campaign be conducted except by persistence and continued iteration?"

Due Process of Law.

Mr. Markham contended that the power contemplated in the law was within the police powers of the state, and that it was for the state Supreme court to construe the provisions of the state constitution. The law, he argued, did not violate the guarantees of the federal constitution because it provided for "due process of law" as commanded by the fourteenth amendment. He denied that the issue of "previous restraint" was raised.

"The constitution was intended to protect the liberties of the individual and was not intended to apply to the commission of a wrong by an individual," he asserted. "Newspapers would do better to sustain such laws as this, for they have the effect of purifying the press."

Arguing on behalf of Near, Attorney Kirkland declared that the Minnesota law did in fact violate the federal constitution. He admitted that the matter published had been defamatory.

"So long as men do evil, so long will newspapers publish defamation," he asserted. "'Boss' Tweed would have invoked such a law as this against the newspapers that exposed the corruption of his regime."

Mr. Kirkland charged that the law was an attempt to avoid the processes of a suit for libel, and asserted that, even more stringently than did the Minnesota law, it limited the defenses that might be offered.

"Freedom of speech and press is a right of such fundamental magnitude that it is necessarily a citizen's adjunct and privilege which the state is powerless to abridge under the fourteenth amendment," he contended. "Such processes as this instituted by the crown under George III. were among the grievances against which the colonists fought in the wars of revolution.

"This statute is unconstitutional, I contend, unless the evil sought to be remedied was of such paramount importance as to threaten the destruction of the state politically, morally, industrially, or economically. On the contrary, the evil it seeks to remedy is such as has always been inseparable from a free press, and history is evidence that it is better to suffer from such an evil than from the manifold evils which arise when the press is fettered."

Held Invalid in Many States.

In its attempt to punish utterances in an intermediate field between personal defamation and seditious utterances inciting to revolution and breach of the peace, Attorney Kirkland asserted the Minnesota law to be similar to the disloyalty acts which have been held unconstitutional in many states.

"It is argued," said Mr. Kirkland, "that legitimate newspapers need not fear this statute. On the contrary, every legitimate newspaper in the country regularly and customarily publishes defamation, as it has a right to in criticizing governmental agencies, for example. It, therefore, is engaged in that business, although no defamation is ordinarily true and justifiable."

The question of jurisdiction was at issue as well as the appeal itself. It was considered an indication that the court had this in mind when Chief Justice Hughes announced, during the course of Mr. Markham's argument, that he need not argue further whether or not freedom of the press was a privilege or immunity under the fourteenth amendment, that prior decisions of the court had so held it. The chief justice requested Mr. Markham to address himself to answering the contention that the statute was an unconstitutional prior restraint so as to be a deprivation of liberty without due process of law.

Repeal Bill in Legislature.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 30.—(AP)—Measures for repeal of Minnesota's newspaper suppression law were before the state legislature while the United States Supreme court heard arguments today on the constitutionality of the act.

Repeal of the law which has aroused nation-wide opposition in newspaper publishing circles is called for in bills introduced in both branches of the legislature, one of them by Senator George H. M. Lommen, author of the original measure enacted in 1925.

A house committee yesterday recommended passage of the repeal measure.

Minnesota's Supreme court twice has sustained the constitutionality of the suppression law and the present case before the United States Supreme court is on appeal from its latest decision. The appeal is based on the contention that the law violated constitutional guarantees of free speech and a free press.

Dance Goes On

Miss Ann Gerry and Mike Gouvas last night were wearily pacing the floor at White City after completing 1,343 hours of marathon dancing. The last 500 hours have been danced with no rest periods. At midnight Miss Gerry caught a few moments of much needed rest while her partner kept her swaying to the music and shuffling his own feet. Another couple is still in the same contest. In the other contest being conducted on the same floor four couples are entering their 3,600th hour and their rest period has been cut to one minute every other day.

BROOKLYN JURY ASKS REVIVAL OF WHIPPING POSTS

Says Criminals Fear Physical Pain.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 30.—[Special.]—The cat o' nine tails and the ancient whipping post were recommended today by a Brooklyn grand jury as the best method of taming modern criminals. The return of the whipping post was urged after the twelve men had passed a month delving into underworld activities in the racket ridden borough.

The revival of the reign of the lash, which ended in New England in prerevolutionary days with the passing of the witch, but which still survives in Delaware, where the whip leaves its welts on the backs of hardened offenders, was suggested by the grand jury as "the best means of discouraging crime and the young criminal."

Report Made by Jurors.

The report, presented to Judge George W. Martin in Kings County court, states:

"A system of corporal punishment should be devised and made applicable to criminals in cases where force and violence has been used in the commission of crimes, and the principle of corporal punishment should be incorporated with the laws of this state."

Joseph F. Clarke, the foreman, explaining the jury's findings to reporters, said the cat o' nine tails was the sort of corporal punishment referred to.

Court to Fix Punishment.

"The grand jury in its recommendation meant the institution of the whipping post," said Foreman Clarke. "The question of the number of lashes would have to be fixed by law. Specifically, we mean we would like to see and urge the same practice now in effect in Delaware. It is our conclusion after a month, which has given us a clearer and deeper insight into criminal conditions, that if we had such a law here, by virtue of which whippings could be administered, there would be less crime. This would affect particularly second and third offenders."

It is the belief of the jurors that prison sentences alone cause little fear on the part of the criminal, and that in the underworld there is no stigma of shame attached to jail records. Public or semi-public whippings, however, would cause the offender to lose caste with his fellow criminals.

SIGHT REGAINED BY TARKINGTON; QUITS HOSPITAL

Battle for Light Started 14 Years Ago.

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 30.—(AP)—With the aid of medical science and his own determination, Booth Tarkington has fought his way back from total blindness to the beauty of light.

BOOTH TARKINGTON.

"At present the picture is a smudge, but I can distinguish color and form and my doctors say that my vision will return," the Indiana novelist said today as he prepared to leave Johns Hopkins hospital.

His fight for light started 14 years ago and during the long struggle cataracts were removed from both eyes and a detached retina in the right eye corrected. Last August, Tarkington revealed today, he became totally blind. Early this month he entered the Wilmer institute at Johns Hopkins for the final phase of a long series of surgical treatments.

Talks of Literature and Life.

Another cataract was removed from his left eye. This week the bandages were removed and the creator of "Penrod," "Seventeen," and "Alice Adams" saw again.

Special glasses are to be prepared for him to wear, one while eating, another for reading, and a third when looking at distant objects.

"I guess I will have to have a holster made to carry them about," he remarked whimsically as he sat on a hospital bed, smoked cigaret after cigaret, and talked of literature and life.

No More Drama for Him.

"I will continue to write, but no more drama," he said. "It isn't fair to the producer. I don't know the taste of New York, and unless a play pleases there it hasn't got a chance. I had a lot of fun producing 'Mr. Satan,' but the manager didn't have any. It was a flop—lasted but three weeks.

"My writing in the last few years has been easy compared with the time when I used to do the stuff in long hand. Now I just sit in an easy chair and dictate five hours a day to my stenographer. Then she and my wife read to me. When one tires the other carries on. It's mostly biography and detective stories nowadays, and we can finish one of the latter in a day."

Tarkington expressed the opinion that the time may be coming when there will be no more novels and novelists.

Looks 200 Years Ahead.

"Perhaps in two or three hundred years," he hazarded, "mechanical apparatus will permit people to push a button or two and see produced whole works in color."

Tarkington said he was pleased that the Nobel prize went to an American, Sinclair Lewis. Later, however, he observed that "the present school of pessimism and sophistication in American authors is imported. It is unreal and unnatural. We naturally are an optimistic race and a people not easily discouraged. It is this characteristic that should prevail."

GANDHI DEMANDS BRITAIN FREE ALL HIS FOLLOWERS

Says Release of Only Few Is Valueless.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 31.—[Saturday.]—The Daily Herald, organ of the Labor government, today prints an exclusive dispatch from Mahatma Gandhi, Indian Nationalist leader, concerning the Indian round table conference.

"The prime minister's statement at the conclusion of the conference would appear wholly inadequate," Mr. Gandhi cabled. "But in common with a majority of congress men, I have absolutely an open mind and have suspended judgment at the earnest request of V. S. Sastri, Dr. Sir Tej Sapru, and Mr. Jayakar. Personally I am eagerly searching for avenues leading to an honorable peace that would give India the freedom she desires and is entitled to."

Demands Prisoners Be Freed.

"The mere release of members of the Nationalist congress working committee and their wives will be of little help. Even for creating an atmosphere suitable for a calm discussion, the release of all congress party prisoners, withdrawal of repressive ordinances and restoration of confiscated property are absolutely essential.

"The congress and other organizations, including women's organizations, are still being declared unlawful. This continuing repression robs the releases of all grace and makes it valueless for the purpose intended."

Menace to Empire—Churchill.

[Copyright: 1931: by the New York Times.]

LONDON, Jan. 30.—Winston Churchill, who yesterday broke away from the leaders of the Conservative party, owing to their support of the MacDonald government's India policy, tonight warned a gathering of several thousand people at Manchester that the question of upholding British authority in India is no ordinary problem of politics, but involves the very life of the British empire.

He argued that the last eighteen months have seen a "deplorable degeneration in British interests and authority" in India, and that the advent of the MacDonald Laborite government had "necessarily stimulated all the forces of sedition and disorder in the east."

The draft of the proposed federal constitution for India which was framed by the London round table conference, he said, had been "loosely put together" and "not one of the thorny problems of Indian life or the real difficulties of machinery was settled.

Assails "Pious Platitudes."

"Gaps and faults in the structure were covered up with clouds of perorations and pious platitudes, and the result of the small blue book now being hawked about is that India is already in a dangerously excited condition in the hope of winning more acceptance.

"Of course," he said, "we are sure there are all kinds of safeguards. What is given in word is taken back in fact; what is given with one hand is taken back with the other."

He sketched the present situation in China, where "250,000 peasants were slaughtered by brigand generals last year alone," as something of what may be expected by a slackening of British control in India.

"If, guided by counsels of madness and cowardice disguised as false benevolence, you troop home from India, you will leave behind you what John Morley called 'a blood chaos,' and you will find famine to greet you on the horizon on your return," he declared

CANAL LAWYER'S PRIVATE BOSS IS WITNESS FOR BAR

A witness testified yesterday at the hearing on the charges brought by the Chicago Bar association against fifty-five lawyers formerly employed by the sanitary district that one of the attorneys under investigation worked for an express company during the entire period he was on the district's pay roll.

The bar association's charges, filed with the Illinois Supreme court, allege that the lawyers received sanitary district money for which no adequate service was rendered. The charges are being heard by Circuit Judge Taylor, sitting as commissioner for the Supreme court.

The witness was J. S. Smith of River Forest, claim accountant for the Railway Express company. He said that Attorney Frank J. Brewbaker, one of the respondents who has already told of his services with the district, has been employed by him continuously since 1921 and that all of Brewbaker's time was spent in the company's offices.

Attorney Brewbaker was employed by the sanitary district from Sept. 15, 1927 to Nov. 15, 1928 at a salary of $4,200.

"I first met Brewbaker in the express company's offices in April, 1919," Smith testified. "In October, 1921, he came under my supervision.

"Mr. Brewbaker audited claims paid by the company's claim agents. His entire time was spent in the office at 817 South Wells street. Our records show that he has been absent from work thirteen and one-half days during the period he was employed by the sanitary district."

Attorney Willard Matheny, representing the association, asked Smith if he knew where Brewbaker was on the days he was absent from work.

"Six of them were on vacation in Colorado," Smith replied. "He spent three days on a visit to his father downstate. I don't know how he spent the remainder."

The record showed Brewbaker had testified at the hearing that he did not know how much time he had spent on the sanitary district work, but that he had spent several months studying cases and after that had made investigations throughout the district. He said he had obtained his job through a former alderman.

Lawyer Tells of His Work.

Another witness was Attorney Arthur F. Manning, one of the respondents, who worked for the district from September, 1927, to November, 1928, for which he was paid $6,456. Manning said he was appointed to the district legal department after talking to the late George Brennan.

Manning said he spent his time looking up law, studying up on the lake level litigation and preparing briefs. He gave lectures on the sanitary district's work for a period of ten days, he said, and made frequent trips to Stickney, Maywood, and Calumet.

Attorney Jacob M. Laventhal, who was on the stand the greater part of Thursday's session telling about the mystery of fourteen of his pay checks from the district which, he said, he never received, was recalled to the stand by Attorney Matheny. He was asked to examine his name, which was signed on the pay roll each month during his employ.

Laventhal said that five of the signatures were not his. Beneath each of these signatures were the initials "I. D." He had previously testified that Isaac Doff, a former ward committeeman, who obtained Laventhal his position, had asked him to sign the pay roll each month although Laventhal said he was not working and did not expect any pay. The checks, introduced as evidence, showed that fourteen of the fifteen had been indorsed by Doff.

WOMEN'S FORUM URGES LAW TO LICENSE DRIVERS

Eight Hour Day Bill Also Advocated.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

While legislators down in Springfield were pondering the advisability of writing upon the statute books legislation of special concern to women, delegates from eleven women's organizations of Illinois assembled at the Morrison hotel yesterday to urge the passage of measures providing for an eight hour day for women, further regulation of child labor, licensing of automobile drivers, and certification of public health nurses.

Each proposed law was taken up before the all-day meeting of the Illinois Women's Joint Legislative forum, discussed by an expert in each field, and debated on the floor by delegates. A similar meeting was held at Bloomington on Thursday, and another will be held at Rockford today.

Urge Motorists' License.

Chief among the pending legislation urged by the women is senate bill No. 1, more familiarly known as the motor drivers' license bill. The passage of this bill, the women believe, will insure greater safety on the streets and highways of Illinois and will reduce motor fatalities. The bill provides for the examination of every one operating motor cars.

"The 1930 statistics show that 32,500 persons were killed and one million maimed or injured by automobiles in the United States," declared John J. Hall of the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters, New York, who made the principal address on safety legislation.

"I doubt if there is a town in Illinois that has not contributed to those national figures. The pending Illinois law is a duplicate of the proposed uniform law as drafted by a conference of highway experts from all over the United States.

"In Pennsylvania 25 per cent of those applying for the privilege of driving a motor car are turned down on the first trial because they know nothing of traffic rules. There are about 3 per cent who finally are prohibited from driving motor cars."

Explains 8 Hour Day Bill.

In discussing the proposed eight hour working day for women, Miss Agnes Nestor, chairman of the women's eight hour day committee, explained that the bill now being drafted will prohibit the employment of women for more than 56 hours in a seven day week, and for more than 48 hours in a six day week.

"An eight hour working day for women is only humane—and humanitarianism is sound economics," declared Miss Mollie Ray Carroll, associate professor of economics at the University of Chicago. "Two-thirds of the women in manufacturing establishments in Illinois which report normal hours of work to the state department of labor work no more than 48 hours a week.

"The 70 hour week, however, still exists in poorly managed industries and in rush season, even during the present period of depression and unemployment. Such women need the protection of the law."

Mrs. Alfred D. Kohn, chairman of the child labor committee, made a plea for support in passing a bill that would further regulate child labor. The proposed measure would include the establishing of a 12 year age limit for boys and an 18 year age limit for girls for the selling of newspapers on the streets after school hours, requiring a permit for children so engaged. It would also limit hours of work and prohibit night work for boys under 16 years old.

The adoption of a shorter election ballot was urged by the election law revision committeee. Mrs. May Wood-Simons, professor at Northwestern university, is chairman of the committee, which believes that a smaller ballot would "be more convenient, better adapted to intelligent choice, harder to vote carelessly, harder for dishonest election officials to falsify, and easier for honest election officials to count accurately."

'BAD JOHN' WRIGHT, HERO OF NOVEL, HILLS PEACE OFFICER, DEAD

Pound, Va., Jan. 30.—(AP)—"Bad John" Wright, who made the law feared in the mountain country where he himself had been a feudist, is dead.

The inspiration for "Devil Judd" Tolliver in John Fox's "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," Wright in his 88 years had an even more colorful career than his fictional counterpart. His forty years as a peace officer in the Cumberlands, where success often depended on a steady nerve and a lightninglike trigger finger, brought him fame and a host of friends in his native hills.

"Bad John" died early today in his little mountain cabin near the Kentucky border. He had been in bad health for many months.

Wright, who was definitely known to have killed nine men, never took a life as a peace officer except in the case of the fugitive refusing to submit to arrest. It never was established whether "Bad John" killed any one in the famous Wright-Hall feud in which a number of men were killed. In later years he refused to discuss the feud.

When Fox made Wright's acquaintance, "Bad John," also known as "the Tall Sycamore of the Elkhorn" because of his gigantic size, was employed as a guard at the Wise county, Va., jail. The author and Wright became fast friends.

"Bad John" never set a definite estimate himself of the number of men he had killed.

He was born in Letcher county, Ky., near the Virginia line.

Hold Up Boys and Take School Cafeteria Money

Pennies and small silver coins totaling $15 which pupils of the Brown grade school, 1758 Warren boulevard, had paid for food was stolen yesterday when two youths pretending to have pistols in their pockets held up two boys who were taking the money in the school cafeteria fund to a nearby bank, Samuel Bodoff, 14 years old, 326 South Winchester avenue, and Ernest Rudkin, 15 years old, 2015 West Monroe street, said the robbers, about 20 years old, ordered them into an alley and seized the money.

BERRYS SETTLE DISPUTE; WIFE TO GET DIVORCE

The H. Roy Berry divorce trial came to a sudden end last evening when Mrs. Frances Mary Berry, 200 East Chestnut street, accepted the terms of a settlement with her husband, a wealthy real estate operator. The settlement was reached in the chambers of Superior Judge Desort after a series of conferences between the litigants, their attorneys and the judge.

Attorney John J. Kelly, representing Mrs. Berry, said that under the terms of the settlement his client will receive a divorce on grounds of cruelty, and alimony of $500 a month for two years at which time she will be given an $85,000 mortgage which will be payable then.

It was reported yesterday that Berry had offered his wife $500 a month allimony for the rest of her life but that she refused because she was dissatisfied with the collateral which her husband was to post to guarantee the payments.

The settlement further provides that Berry will withdraw the divorce action which he filed against his wife. Both bills charged cruelty and drunkenness.

PRIME MINISTER OF CANADA CALLS AT WHITE HOUSE

Holds 2 Conferences with President Hoover.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—Prime Minister Richard B. Bennett of Canada participated in two informal conferences with President Hoover today, but no official business was transacted, according to White House and state department officials who welcomed the distinguished Canadian visitor on his first trip to Washington.

After the first conference, one of half an hour, in the executive office at the White House, President Hoover announced that Mr. Bennett's visit was not official and that no formal matters were under discussion. At a White House conference this evening, it is understood, various problems, such as the St. Lawrence waterway and the border prohibition problem, were touched on during the conversations.

Hoover Welcomes Guest.

"I have been," said President Hoover, following Mr. Bennett's afternoon visit, "very glad to welcome today the Canadian premier upon his informal visit to Washington. We have no formal matters under discussion. We are mutually interested in the common welfare of our people. Informal conversations on problems of the future always lead to better understanding. I consider it a great compliment that Mr. Bennett has found it possible to come to Washington."

After his first conversation with the President the prime minister went to the state department, where he was closeted for half an hour with Secretary of State Stimson. After the departure of Mr. Bennett, Secretary Stimson said that none of the big questions pending between the two countries were mentioned.

Dinner Guest of Hoover's.

The White House tonight, according to the general understanding, was the scene of the really important conference between the heads of the two governments. Mr. Bennett was the dinner guest of the President and Mrs. Hoover, the others present being Secretary Stimson, Assistant Secretary of State William R. Castle, Hume Wrong, the Canadian charge d'affaires, and Hanford Macnider, the American minister at Ottawa.

On his arrival this morning Mr. Bennett went immediately to the Canadian legation. This afternoon the legation gave a tea in his honor.

Mr. Bennett will visit Arlington tomorrow and place wreaths on the tomb of the unknown soldier and on the Canadian memorial shaft. In the afternoon he will continue his conversations with American officials. Sunday he starts back to Ottawa.

CAPONE NAMED AS HOT SPRINGS GAMBLING CHIEF

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 30.—(AP)—Al Capone, Chicago gangster, was charged on the floor of the house of representatives today with having acquired gambling interests at Hot Springs.

Representative Cannon introduced a resolution, which was tabled, asking for an investigation by a house committee.

"I have been reliably informed," Cannon said, "that certain Chicago interests headed by Al Capone have acquired gambling interests in Hot Springs and that Graland county is rapidly filling up with Chicago gangsters who have been sent there as dealers in games of chance."

CHINA DRAWS UP CODE TO GOVERN FOREIGN RIGHTS

Paves Way to Abolish Extraterritoriality.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PEIPING, Jan. 30.—Although both President Chiang Kai-shek and Foreign Minister Wang have announced that extraterritoriality in China will be abolished in February, this is a statement of hopes rather than of facts, for while this means the rewriting of numerous treaties, and possibly negotiations that may run into months, it is hardly thought the issue can be closed entirely for several years.

The United States is prepared to abandon its extraterritorial privileges by a gradual relinquishment over a period of years, and Great Britain holds a similar view, but not entirely along the American lines. France possibly may be a stumbling block. Japan, while agreed in principle with the American and British ideas, has several technical details on which she will invite debate. Italy, Belgium and some of the other powers doubtless will concur in the American and British position.

Will Come Up After May.

In announcing the program of the foreign office for 1931, Dr. Wang placed the question of extraterritoriality second to the holding of the People's conference in May.

It would appear to be the Chinese plan to promulgate a provisional law to meet the temporary requirements during the interval pending the organization of proper courts throughout China and that consular jurisdiction may be released slowly as these courts demonstrate their competence to handle the delicate questions involved. However, from time to time, officers of the Nationalist government have averred, the government will be forced to take independent and decisive action.

The diplomatic commission of the central political council has drawn up, but not yet promulgated, a code covering Sino-foreign cases. The plan seems to be that cases between Chinese and foreigners shall be submitted first to the Chinese District court for settlement, but that special courts will be formed as a sort of Court of Appeals. Foreign advisers will be permitted to participate in these special courts, but they shall not be allowed to interfere with the judgments and merely may submit their views in law.

U. S. and Britain Approve.

Subject to certain reservations, which thus far have not been published, since exchanges are continuing, both the United States and Great Britain have given approval in principle to the general outline as drawn. Meantime the Chinese judicial authorities in Shanghai, Tientsin, Canton, and Hankow, and other cities where cases against or by foreigners are frequent, have been asked to submit their views as to the handling of Sino-foreign cases.

As far as the United States is concerned, its negotiations are on what seem to be favorable lines, and the same may be said to be generally true of Great Britain.

Foreign Minister Wang recently said:

"Europe is often the hub of world diplomacy, but in recent years the United States has come to play an increasing part in the shaping of world relations. But if the United States wants to sell her surplus goods to China she has to meet our legitimate national demand for the abolition of extraterritoriality."

SEEK PATRONS OF 3 STUDENT BOOTLEGGERS

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—University of Michigan and county authorities collaborated today to discover the list of patrons of three alleged student bootleggers. Dean Joseph A. Bursley was working with sheriff's deputies to run down clews, such as phone numbers, canceled checks, among the effects of the prisoners.

Two of the students charged with bootlegging are said to have confessed. Dean Bursley denied a list of customers had been found, but admitted the prisoners supplied many campus names.

COOK COUNTY TAX BILLS WILL GET EARLY HEARING

New Assessing System Is Proposed.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Measures to wipe out the present taxing machinery of Cook county and to substitute a modern, simplified system were picked yesterday for early consideration at Springfield, following the warning of Silas H. Strawn that Chicago and environs are facing another crisis of no money to run the government.

Elmer J. Schnackenberg, sponsor of three bills to abolish the board of assessors, the board of review, and the township assessors in Cook county towns, announced that on Tuesday he will seek to have a hearing set by Leroy M. Green of Rockford, chairman of the house revenue committee. Michael L. Igoe, minority leader, added his voice for quick action, and the subject may be thrown into open committee discussion about Feb. 10, with a preliminary hearing possible next week.

Assessors Fight for Jobs.

Meanwhile thirty Cook county township assessors, who face the loss of their positions, met to discuss action opposing the loss of their jobs. The conference was held in the office of George Harbough, assessor for New Trier. It brought a comment from Mr. Strawn.

"The assessors, it appears, are jealous to keep their jobs," he said. "But the city has some rights. Some patriots appear to have the idea the banks will finance the city and county forever and taxes will not be paid any more.

"Cook county now has 38 persons in charge of assessments. There are 29 town assessors, besides the boards of assessors and review. There is no responsible head. Too many are on the job and they have too many little groups to consider.

Must Be Central Authority.

"The result is so much political dawdling that tax collections are far behind and the governments will be unable to sell tax anticipation warrants. Unless the present taxing machinery, in which every one has lost faith, is discarded, and a centralized responsibility is established, the city and county will be up against a crisis again.

"The quicker action is taken at Springfield the better, for nobody has confidence in the present taxing machinery. Indications are that the assessment of 1929 taxes will not be completed in time, and the assessments for 1930 and 1931 will be long delayed. Unless anticipation warrants are sold the local governments will be without funds, and nobody is going to buy anticipation warrants unless the bills are passed and the reform is made in the assessing machinery."

Three Bills in House.

Mr. Schnackenberg has three bills in the house. One of them, No. 26, and a companion bill, No. 27, proposes to abolish the board of assessors and the township assessors, and substitute one county assessor, a scientific expert, appointed by the president of the county board. This measure retains the present board of review but changes the terms to four years, making all expire at the same time.

This bill also places restrictions upon the board of review, stipulating that before it can change an assessment it must give written notice of the hearing and allow the assessor opportunity to defend his assessment. It also provides that the reviewers cannot proceed to review an assessment except on a verified complaint, and that after a public hearing if any change is made the reason for the change, specifying how the assessor erred, must be entered of record and a copy filed with the county assessor.

The other Schnackenberg bill, No. 28 (by request), is the bill of the joint tax commission. It abolishes the township assessors, the board of review, and it creates a board of assessment and revision of three members to be appointed by the president of the county board, with consent of the board.

One to Be County Assessor.

One member of the board, who is to possess knowledge and experience as an appraiser, is to be designated by the president of the county board as chairman of the board of assessment and revision. He is to be the county assessor.

The bills carry emergency clauses, Mr. Schnackenberg declaring the need of passage before March 16, as the 1929 taxes become delinquent April 1. Mr. Strawn declares bill No. 28, which abolishes the board of review and the board of assessors, is satisfactory.

"The trouble has been," said Mr. Schnackenberg, "that with 38 officials engaged in the assessments they have been working at sixes and sevens.

"There has been no centralized responsibility, and the people have lost faith in the machinery. Again, the board of review has acted as an assessing body instead of reviewing. There has been such a multiplicity of complaints that the assessment machinery is away behind in its work. The 1929 taxes become delinquent April 1, but at the rate the work is going along the taxes will not be ready for payment April 1. The solution is to simplify."

Chinese General and Two Aids Tortured to Death

SHANGHAI, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Barbaric cruelties inflicted by Reds upon defeated government troops in Kiangsi province were related today in dispatches from Nanchang. Gen. Chang Hui-tsai, commander of 12,000 government troops whom the communists recently disarmed, was reported tortured to death when the government failed to pay $460,000 for his release. The story was brought to Nanchang by one of three brigadier generals with the captured army. The two other brigadiers suffered Gen. Chang's fate.

SPRING FASHIONS MORE FEMININE; STYLE SHOW NEAR

Gay colors and feminine lines will be the rule among the spring and summer fashions that was indicated by clothes worn yesterday in a rehearsal of a style show which opens next Monday night in the Morrison hotel Terrace Garden.

VIOLA ALEEN.

The show will be sponsored by the Morrison hotel exhibitors, continue for two weeks, and will represent more than 300 manufacturers from over the country. It is a semi-annual show. It will be in the form of a dinner show, from 7:15 to 9:30 o'clock nightly. Earl Carroll and his cast will appear the first evening, it was announced.

Broad brimmed, shallow crowned hats of coarsely woven straws will be all the rage this summer, Ger Sunde, producer of the show, said. Red for sports wear, flowered chiffons with "monkey jackets," short jackets of the dress material, and embroidered knits for sports will be in fashion. Pastel pink and pastel blue will be combined in smart sports dresses. The Russian effect in pajamas is the latest style change in lingerie. Beach costumes of both silk and cotton materials were shown.

Business among the retail dress merchants is better than it has been in more than two years, Sunde said. Part of this he attributed to the fact that women definitely have accepted long skirts for afternoon and evening wear.

MASSEN TELLS PROBLEMS OF CONSOLIDATION

Unity Needed in Police, Health and Traffic.

In working out a plan for the consolidation of some of the local governments, Ald. John A. Massen [48th] and the council subcommittee which he heads were confronted yesterday with the problem of determining what activities should be unified under one authority and how the officials of this centralized body should be selected.

Ald Massen said he believed a consolidation must be worked out on a functional rather than a territorial basis. That is, where a function is metropolitan in its scope it should be performed by a metropolitan authority, leaving only strictly local affairs to the smaller governing units.

Alderman Gives Examples.

"For instance," said Ald. Massen, "epidemics pay no attention to city and village boundary lines, therefore health powers should be consolidated under metropolitan authority. Likewise traffic in its movement gives no heed to municipal jurisdictions. Crime is metropolitan in its operations. The development of lake front and recreational facilities anywhere in Cook county is a matter of common concern to every resident in the county. You cannot deal satisfactorily with the problems of water supply, sanitation, and drainage on a village basis."

Construction of superhighways would be facilitated, Ald. Massen asserted, if only one body had authority to approve of plans. As it is now, officials of the city, of the county, of various suburbs, and perhaps of a park board or two must get together before a superhighway can be built.

Consolidation Effective Now.

The sanitary district was pointed to by Ald. Massen as an instance of the handling of a metropolitan activity by one body in dealing with sewage for all of Cook county and for some districts outside the county boundary lines.

Another example he gave was the service rendered to the suburbs by the inspection of dairy farms by employés of the Chicago health department. Evanston and other suburbs, he said, buy milk that is guarded from contamination by Chicago taxpayers.

FOUND SHOT IN BALL PARK.

Charles Howard, 29 years old, a Negro, was found dead yesterday in the baseball diamond at 55th street in Washington park. There were two bullet holes in his back and his widow blamed an unidentified man with whom he fought several days ago. The Howards lived at 3237 Calumet avenue.

GOVERNOR TURNS ON FARMERS FOR STAND ON TAXES

Asks Why They Have No Plan of Their Own.

BY PAUL POTTER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—Gov. Emmerson today characterized as "reactionary" the attitude of the Illinois Agricultural association, composed of 60,000 farmers, in its stand to "oppose whatever is suggested without offering anything yourselves."

In the administration's efforts to revise the state revenue system, the governor spoke before the bureau's sixteenth annual meeting, which closed tonight. Until all interests are willing to get together and agree upon a plan for tax reform, he declared, Illinois will continue in its present or in a worse financial situation.

In assailing the farmers' position, the governor was regarded as having evened the score with the association when it declined to support the constitution revenue amendment at the polls last November. He placed in the same category "other organizations such as yours which should assume a position of leadership." This was taken as a mild reflection on the Illinois Manufacturers association and others openly opposed to the results of last summer's special legislative session.

Stout Replies to Governor.

The farm association delegates plainly were resentful of the governor's castigation, as voiced by John Stout, president of the Sangamon county farm bureau, who challenged the declaration that the association had not been constructive in its attitude toward tax burden relief.

How bad the present revenue situation in Illinois is, "You may not realize," the governor continued. Referring to a statement in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE that more than $51,000,000 of 1928 taxes have not yet been collected, of which 70 per cent is in real estate taxes on property worth more than two billion dollars, he asked:

"Is it not quite evident that real estate taxes are becoming confiscatory?"

Cook county, the governor asserted, owes the state some $17,000,000, long overdue. The unpaid balance in 1928 taxes due last year amounts to about $4,000,000, with $13,000,000 more in 1929 levies.

Revenue Fund Short $6,182,015.

This means the general revenue fund is short $6,182,015, he said. The University of Illinois, soldiers' bonus, waterway bonds, and blind relief funds are locking $5,276,026 more. He laid the delay in collection to Cook county's reassessment of real estate. "I never have been able to learn exactly what good the reassessment did aside from calling attention to our inefficient tax system, but whatever it did it will cost Cook county taxpayers a tremendous amount."

Gov. Emmerson then outlined his plan of reapportionment and expressed the hope that "the various interests, by cooperating under the leadership of the new state tax commission, will agree upon a plan for removing the present inequalities in the tax laws."

Earl Smith, reelected with all other farm bureau officers, laid the agrarian position before the 3,000 farmers. The defeated revenue amendment, he said, had been altered by the hous "even to the point of emasculation." That two-thirds of the November voters "failed to show any tax consciousness," he said, "discloses the futility of looking to the voters for tax relief in the form of amendment to the constitution."

The association opposed "diversion of any portion of the gasoline tax funds to cities, towns, and villages," favoring the state's maintaining and reconstructing surfaced city streets previously designated as state highways.

"We favor the enactment of a personal income tax law with moderate exemptions and with progressive rates sufficient, with funds from other sources, to enable the state to dispense with all taxes upon property for all state purposes," the farmers voted.

Approval of the federal farm board, the actions of the United States department of agriculture, and the 4-H Boys and Girls' club movement also was given.

FINNISH BREWERS ASK PERMISSION TO PEP UP BEER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Jan. 30.—The brewers' union today petitioned the Finnish government to amend the law fixing the alcoholic content in beer. They emphasize the hopelessness of their position in the brewing industry since the introduction of the beer tax, which does not allow of a better quality beer.

Most of the sales in the various breweries have dropped to a fifth of the normal volume. One brewery has not sold a bottle of beer since the beginning of the year.

The Finnish brewers, in urging new legislation to increase the strength of beer from two to three per cent, cited the fact that crime in Finland is twenty times greater than in Scandinavian countries. They claim this is because the Finns are drinking strong spirits because they cannot obtain good beer.

LAMP EXPLOSION KILLS.

Washburn, Ill., Jan. 30.—(AP)—Mrs. Elizabeth Held, 81, died today of burns suffered when a kerosene lamp exploded.

THREE PAIRS OF FATHERS, SONS KILLED IN MINE

WHITE HAVEN, England, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Forty-five coal miners, trapped by an explosion in the Haig pit a thousand feet under the Irish sea and two miles from shore, were brought to the pit head today as their weeping wives and children waited, but only seventeen of them were still alive.

Two hundred miners were quitting work in the pit when the explosion came, but only those at the extreme end of the section were caught. Throughout the night and most of today rescue work continued until at last all were accounted for.

Among the 28 dead were three pairs of fathers and sons and one young man who was to have been married today.

Rescuers who risked their own lives in the gas filled passages said the position of the bodies indicated the victims had died while they crawled on their hands and knees with their noses close to the floor in a vain attempt to escape the gas and reach safety. The cause of the explosion was not determined.

RECORDS REVEAL 100% INCREASE IN ATTACK CASES

Safety of Women Seen as Grave Problem.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Harry Guzik, formerly known as Harry Cusick, a high lieutenant of Al Capone and brother of Jack Guzik, public enemy, was convicted of selling a country girl into white slavery on Feb. 17, 1923. On March 19 of that year the Appellate court approved that conviction. But on June 30, 1923, Len Small, then governor, relieved Guzik of his punishment by commuting his sentence.

Since then there has been a large increase in the offenses against women of Chicago. Criminal attacks on women and girls have doubled in the period between 1922 and 1929, according to the police records. On a percentage basis, police reports show that rape has increased five times as fast as the population in that seven year period.

Crime Grows with Racketeering.

This is one crime which has not been reported to the federal government. If the showing in handling it had been favorable, there would have been an incentive to have reported the number of offenses monthly. Areas where women were unmolested a few years back now report an occasional attack. At intervals racketeers are charged with assaults upon women and girls.

With the growth of racketeering, the police records show that criminal attacks upon women have increased 100 per cent. The police record indicating that the hazard to womanhood in Chicago is twice as great as a few years back is shown in the following table of charges of rape and assault to rape annually from 1922 to 1929:

1928	415	74	489
1927	418	92	510
1926	334	81	415
1925	339	78	417
1923	255	80	335
Totals	2,733	585	3,318

Comparatively few persons place confidence in the exact accuracy of police records, but they are usually relied upon to show large trends in crime. The Municipal court records, however, are probably the most complete and accurate of any court in the country. They indicate that the criminal attacks upon women are a serious menace to the community.

The Chicago police claim by their records to be unusually successful in arresting the men charged with criminal assaults upon women, and the Municipal judges have held one-half of those arrested to the grand jury for indictment.

Record of Court Cases.

In the period between 1923 and 1930, both inclusive, the Municipal court heard 3,334 cases of criminal attacks upon women. Of these 1,679 were held to the Criminal court for action by the grand jury. In the preliminary hearing 801 were discharged, 245 were nolle prossed, and 659 were discharged for want of prosecution.

Perhaps some slipped through the net which should have been referred to the grand jury, but the 1,679 cases are significant. That is the number of crimes against women in which the Municipal judges have decided, after sitting as examining magistrates and hearing testimony on both sides, there is sufficient evidence of probable guilt to warrant binding the defendants to the grand jury. That is an average of 209 attacks annually for the eight years.

What Police Report Shows.

Skipping over the tedious task of several days to ascertain exactly how many of these 1,679 defendants were set free in the grind through the Criminal court, the police record of their own net results for two years will be presented. It is presumably what the police want to say about themselves, because the record is taken from the official annual reports.

In 1923 when ex-Gov. Small relieved Harry Guzik from punishment upon conviction for pandering, the police report shows that seven convicted rapists were sent either to Joliet or Chester, one to Pontiac reformatory, one to jail, ten were placed on probation, seven sent to the bridewell and eight fined. That is a total of 34 convictions out of 283 reported arrests for criminal assault upon women.

In 1929 there were 46 convictions in the Criminal court out of 429 reported arrests. In proportion to arrests there was 30 per cent more convictions in 1923 than in 1929. The penalties in 1929, however, were more severe. The police report shows 37 were sent to Joliet or Chester, seven to Pontiac, and two placed on probation. In 1929 the police gathered sufficient evidence to convict only a trifle more than one in 10 arrested.

Prosecution Called Consistent.

The penalties in 1929 indicate that the prosecution was more consistent and careful than in 1923, where there was convincing evidence, but apparantly the police failed to deliver the evidence in as large a proportion of the cases.

Certain municipal judges and the state's attorney have appreciated the seriousness of attacks upon women for more than two years, judging from the combined court reports, but no noticeable progress was made until last year when public attention was focused on crime by the crime commission's list of public enemies, the arrests for vagrancy, the appointment of a new police chief, and the publicity given racketeers and criminals.

In 1929 and 1930, approximately 58 per cent of the persons arrested for assaults upon women were held to the grand jury by municipal judges. In the previous six years the percentage was never over 50 and ran as low in two years as 42 per cent. The result is that 1930 shows the first material reduction in the number of charges in the last eight years. The number for 1930 is only 40 per cent higher than the number of 1923. The year of 1930 shows about 30 per cent more convictions in the criminal court than in 1923, and with more severe penalties.

Record Not Good One.

In comparison with other large cities, which report their criminal assaults on women to the federal bureau for tabulation and circulation, Chicago has an unenviable record. No student has made an investigation to determine how many of the budding racketeers have been caught and punished. It is seldom that three days pass without a report of an attack upon some woman, and frequently the police reports credit an attack upon "hoodlums" and their satellites.

It is generally admitted that morons commit many of these crimes, but it is the theory of certain social workers that because racketeering criminals have been able to do as they please their small fry have become more bold in their attacks upon women.

New Deal for Islands

At the same time he announced he would appoint Dr. Paul M. Pearsons of Pennsylvania as governor.

The new government will be under the jurisdiction of the interior department. The islands previously had been administered by the navy.

Legislation designed to improve conditions in the islands has been passed by congress. They were purchased by the United States from Denmark in 1917 for $25,000,000. They are located in the West Indies.

SENATORS URGE REAPPOINTING OF G. E. Q. JOHNSON

Reappointment of George E. Q. Johnson for another term as United States attorney in the Chicago district has been recommended to President Hoover by Senators Otis F. Glenn and Charles S. Deneen, Senator Glenn announced in Washington yesterday.

Mr. Johnson's term expires on Feb. 7. Inasmuch as his retention as United States attorney is known to be desired by both President Hoover and Attorney General Mitchell, his reappointment appears assured. Mr. Johnson declined to comment.

The Illinois senators have not reached an agreement on other federal patronage positions to be filled, according to Washington dispatches. Senator Deneen's term expires on March 4, leaving Senator Glenn the chief patronage dispenser.

Inquest Frees Girl of 5 for Killing Her Mother

Little Theresa Mattera, 5 years old, who on Jan. 20 shot and killed her mother in their home at 2054 Kendall avenue, was exonerated yesterday by six members of a coroner's jury who found difficulty in suppressing tears as she told how the gun she had found in a trunk exploded.

"I just told mama to look what I found and then it went off," said Theresa, bursting into tears. She was turned over to her father.

NEW DONATIONS RAISE JOB FUND TO $4,115,000

Committee Makes Report on Use of Money.

Yesterday's contributions of $20,760 raised the total amount collected and pledged to the $5,000,000 relief fund being raised by the governor's unemployment commission to approximately $4,115,000. The largest single gift of the day, a check for $5,767, came from the Sinclair Refining company and employés.

"Despite yesterday's small contributions," said Philip R. Clarke, chairman of the fund raising committee, "the addition of 38 prominent business men to the committee soliciting individual gifts from the wealthy has caused so much enthusiasm among our volunteer workers that we are confident we will raise the entire $5,000,000 before the end of the drive on Feb. 11. Even then we will be the last of the major cities to have reached our quota."

The relief contributions should be sent to the Emergency Relief Campaign, 105 South La Salle street, the checks to be made to J. E. Otis, treasurer, Mr. Clarke said.

Show How Funds Are Spent.

A report of the activities of the commission was made public yesterday by Frank D. Loomis, chairman of the relief and budget committee. In order to halt rumors that some of the money is not being spent for relief of the needy, figures were presented to show actual disbursement of funds collected. These figures revealed that not a cent was spent for office fixtures, help, or postage.

The original quota of $5,000,000, to be raised before Feb. 11, is to care for the needy to April 1. The report, complete up to 8 a. m. yesterday, showed that up to that time $4,094,533.28 had been collected and pledged. A total of $2,483,503.47 had been appropriated up to yesterday morning.

The Committee Figures.

	Appropriations.	Expended.
Family relief	$1,000,000	$367,547
Shelter division	300,000	72,785
Special work fund	760,000	572,681
Agency deficits	323,504	323,504
Clothing account	43,000	31,073
Special funds	32,000	26,443
Childrens' homes	25,000	1,950
Total	$2,483,504	$1,395,903

The report showed the balance remaining of the funds appropriated but not yet expended to be $1,087,511, or the exact difference between the appropriations and expenditures.

The work fund is paid directly to public and semi-public agencies having work. Work is given to heads of families, who most need relief. Each man is allowed to earn $50 a month, at the rate of about $4.50 a day.

$848,540 IS LOW BID ON ILLINOIS WATERWAY LOCK

The Congress Construction company of Chicago was the lowest of 17 bidders whose bids for the Dresden island lock and dam segment of the Illinois waterway were opened yesterday by Col. William C. Weeks, United States army engineer.

The bid was $848,540, more than $300,000 below the estimates of the army engineers and almost $600,000 below the high bid of $1,436,685, submitted by the Drabo Contracting company. Col. Weeks will submit his choice of bids to the chief of army engineers, who is expected to approve it, and work should begin by the end of February.

The Dresden island lock and dam segment is near Morris, and is the third of five such projects made possible by $17,000,000 appropriated by the state and $7,500,000 authorized by congress. The bids call for all masonry work for the various gates, lock valves, and operating bridges.

Bids for completion of the Brandon road lock and dam segment will be opened on Monday. The Lockport segment and the lock and dam at Starved Rock are virtually complete. The lock has been completed at Marseilles. The state must spend $3,00,000 to replace old bridges.

Boy Struck by a City Truck Is Awarded $10,000

John Tomaszkiewicz, 7 years old, 2346 North Leavitt street, was awarded damages of $10,000 yesterday by a jury in Superior Judge Kavanagh's court for injuries incurred when he was run down by a garbage truck owned by the city. The suit filed in behalf of the boy charged that the truck sped away after the accident and that the driver was never apprehended. Several witnesses identified the truck as having been one owned by the city. The boy suffered a compound fracture of the skull.

VETERAN FINDS FRIENDS INDEED THROUGH SALLY

They Offer Him the Jobs He Needs.

Several persons helped to provide temporary work yesterday for a war veteran who has been out of employment for the last 11 months. He was described in yesterday's TRIBUNE, which told of his two small children and his plea for a job. He said he was a piano tuner and furniture finisher.

Miss L. W., in Oak Park, and Mrs. L. M., in the 8000 block on Manistee avenue, called Sally Joy Brown of THE TRIBUNE, who aids the unemployed, and offered the veteran jobs tuning their pianos. Three other persons called to ask for his name and address. They were supplied confidentially on the understanding that they wished to aid him.

Other Jobs Provided.

The C. C. Belting company provided jobs for two men at salaries of $20 and $22 a week, doing piece work in the company's shop.

C. H., in the 4500 block on Hazel avenue, provided a job for an electrician, P. G., in the 5300 block on Cornell avenue, created a job. He offered 50 cents an hour to a man to do some cleaning. This was commended by Sally Joy Brown as the number of jobs for men are far less in number than those for women.

The W. R. P. company, in the 2100 block on Walnut street, offered a job doing chromium plating. The H. S. T. & R. company, on the south side, offered a job to a woman stenographer at $20 a week. Miss J. G., in the 6100 block on Greenwood avenue, offered day work to a woman at 50 cents an hour. The work is to clean her apartment.

Work for Men Offered.

C. R., in the 800 block on Dakin street, offered $5 a day to a man who could do some carpentry and a little plumbing. C. F., in the 8100 block on South Paulina street, provided a job for a man, washing windows.

E. C., in the 1100 block on East 32d street, asked for a man who could scrub floors and wash windows. H. H., in the 100 block on West Madison street, provided a two days' job for a man, painting and doing odd jobs.

Sally Joy Brown turns over to the Illinois Free Employment service, 116 North Dearborn street, all jobs offered to the unemployed by readers of THE TRIBUNE who telephone or write her. A falling off of jobs has been experienced in her department recently, while applicants for jobs at the employment agency are no less numerous than before.

Seven Tribesmen Executed by Italy for Treason

ROME, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Seven tribesmen were executed for treason following the capture by Italian troops last week of the oasis of Kufra, North Africa, a report from that sector disclosed today. The captives taken during the action included 32 native warriors, about 100 women and children, and 50 head of cattle.

27 MORE FAMILIES RECEIVE A LIFT FROM GOOD FELLOW GIFTS

The adoption of 27 more families during the last week was announced yesterday from the headquarters of THE TRIBUNE Good Fellows fund. That brings the total number of families maintained by the Good Fellows to 304.

When the first call was sent out to the Good Fellows last October to extend their Christmas giving to a period covering the midwinter months, it was estimated that at least 100 families might be given a lift over the slack in employment. Good Fellows rallied to the call and tripled within a little more than three months' time, the original estimate.

The adoption of the new families means that social agencies—the United Charities, Catholic Charities, Jewish Charities and the Salvation Army—have turned over to the care of Good Fellows some of the neediest families known to them, families they have investigated thoroughly. Every cent that has been contributed to the Good Fellow fund by TRIBUNE readers goes to Good Fellow families. The cost of administering the fund is borne entirely by THE TRIBUNE.

WRIT DENIED FOR STATE WITNESSES AGAINST WHITE

The habeas corpus petition asking for the production in court of John Joyce, one of the state's main witnesses against William J. [Three Fingered Jack] White, who is under indictment for the murder of a Forest Park policeman, was dismissed yesterday by Judge Joseph Burke in the Criminal court. The action was taken when Assistant State's Attorney Q. J. Chott produced a letter from Joyce in which he said that he authorized no petition for habeas corpus and did not want to leave the protection of the state's attorney's office.

Prosecutor Chott had previously declared that the move was being made by attorneys interested in the defense of White, who wanted to force Joyce into court and find out what he will testify to at the White trial. The petition was brought in the name of Mrs. Elizabeth Joyce Butler, mother of the witness.

MacDONALD FAILS TO END LOCKOUT OF TEXTILE MEN

LONDON, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Negotiations undertaken by Prime Minister MacDonald in an effort to settle labor difficulties in the Lancashire cotton textile industry ended in failure today.

Nearly a quarter of a million weavers were locked out by mill owners when they refused to accept a system by which each weaver would be required to tend twice as many looms as heretofore. The employers offered a $10 a week wage increase, but the weavers said the system would throw many men out of work.

Now! Make Up Only Once A Day

A New Idea from Paris that Takes the Bother Out of Make-up. No Caking. No Drying. No Unsightly "Lipstick Line"

You use it on your cheeks, too—just a touch with the finger-tips—and thus have the color of your cheeks blend perfectly with the color of your lips.

AWAY has been found that not only gives a perfect lip make-up quicker and easier than any way known before, but that HOLDS perfectly all day long. Instead of making up every hour, you make up only once or twice a day!

It's a French idea, of course. And in both France and America it is rapidly changing present ways of make-up.

The creation of Louis Philippe, temperamental colourist, whom all of Paris follows in the art of make-up, it banishes all smearing, all caking and drying and ends completely the unsightly "lipstick line" most women complain of a few minutes after making up.

WHAT IT IS

It is called Angelus Rouge Incarnat and comes as probably the nearest thing to a permanent make-up yet discovered. It is different from any American rouge you have ever seen, though its form is the same.

Louis Philippe, temperamental French colourist, who has made make-up an art—and about whom all Paris is talking. Shown here with one of his famous clients, Hope Hampton, of movie fame.

You can use it, too, on BOTH LIPS AND CHEEKS. And thus gain a color harmony that's amazing in contrast to using separate lipstick and rouge—both, invariably, of different color. (Note picture above.)

Thus you gain the PERFECT Parisian make-up of today. And—it lasts for hours.

No more annoyance of constant making up. No uneven make-up. No caking, no smearing—and so exquisitely smooth that you cannot even feel it.

COMES IN TWO FORMS

All department and drug stores have it now under the name of Angelus Rouge Incarnat in two forms: Ordinary lipstick form, and in the charming "Little Red Box." Most women prefer the box. 9 different colors. Same price as American rouges.

Economical Operations Conserve Tribune Timber Resources

"Many a mickle makes a muckle," is a saying as Scotch in principle as it is in dialect. Rephrasing it for application to the Chicago Tribune's operation of its Canadian timberlands, it can be stated that "many a chip makes a ton of paper."

When, in 1915, the Tribune started cutting wood it found wasteful methods in use. Trees were cut too high from the ground. The Tribune forbade its lumberjacks to cut any tree more than eighteen inches above its base. It also forbade them to make deep ax notches. Multiplied by 2,000,000—the number of trees annually felled by the Tribune—the savings thus made run into hundreds of tons of newsprint.

CRIME AND BAD BUSINESS.

The reign of violent crime in Chicago is not merely a danger to the personal safety of citizens, but one of the most serious causes of business depression in the city. Chicago is the mercantile center of the midwest, drawing for a substantial part of its prosperity upon thousands of buyers and visitors from outside the city limits. That the effect upon our business activities of the flagrant violence afflicting the city, including robberies and shootings in the business district, can be anything short of repressive no sensible person can fail to see.

The suppression of crime, therefore, is the first duty and interest of the citizenship of Chicago. The foremost need is to insure the establishment of a city administration which can be depended upon to attack crime with all its force and to keep up the attack until crime is driven out and crushed.

This is the outstanding issue of the present municipal campaign, and it gives to the candidacy of Judge Lyle in the Republican primary a unique importance. Judge Lyle has proved beyond fair question to be possessed of the militant will to crush the criminal. His nomination alone would drive many of the worst criminals to safer regions and put the wholesome restraint of fear upon the whole criminal population. Crime already recognizes in Judge Lyle its most formidable foe. It will undoubtedly exercise every ounce of its widespreading influence to defeat him. The rest of the opposition to him is selfish factional politics. This politics has wrangled over party power and spoils and produced absolutely nothing for the defeat of misgovernment or the suppression of crime. It offers no assurance of the results demanded by the decent citizenship for the city, for it has never produced them in the past. Judge Lyle has proved his courage, his determination, and his initiative in the conflict with organized crime. He has taken the lead in the fight and has earned the confidence of the people and the civic agencies engaged in it and, we think, of such of the public as realizes the paramount fact to the city and all its inhabitants that crime is a fatal drain upon their prosperity as well as an increasing danger to persons and property.

RELIEF AND THE AMERICAN ORDER.

There is no other country than ours in which private wealth so conspicuously proves its sense of public responsibility and its readiness to contribute liberally to create or maintain public benefits. In huge bequests and gifts to institutions of learning, hospitals, and public benefactions of all sorts this sense is constantly demonstrated. Nowhere else is this giving so common or upon such a scale as among Americans.

This is, of course, a product of American character and social conditions and is shown according to means by the American people generally. But it is exceptional, we think, as to the rich as compared to the same class in other countries, and we refer to it at this time because there seems to be in some quarters a disposition to hold back large contributions to public relief, although people of narrower means are showing the usual American sense of responsibility toward their fellow citizens suffering from the business reaction. This disposition is exceptional, though it is in some measure explainable. All Americans, even the wealthy, have suffered a drastic reduction in means. All or at any rate most are beset with uncertainty as to the future. Our people of all economic classes are indulging in a pessimism as extreme as the optimism which largely produced the conditions now afflicting them. But added to this are the doubts and alarms which the threat of radical political experiment and the prospect of greatly increased political exactions through ill-considered public expenditure and experiments in government enterprise are spreading abroad.

We think these doubts and alarms are exaggerated and that the prospect of a demoralization of the American economic and political system is not what present conditions in our demoralized senate lead some of us to fear. The popular house, closer to people than the senate, seems to be keeping its head. The defense of American principles will gather force. The constructive elements of the nation will make themselves felt with increasing effect. In spite of the setback in our prosperity and acute ills of readjustment, the faith of the American people in American methods and principles of progress—proved throughout the nation's history—we hope is not going to be repudiated under the influence of a noisy few.

Nevertheless, it is true that the American system is on trial and that its defense is not in argument but in practical action. This is a matter not merely one of political resistance, but also and immediately of individual contribution to relief. Neither the pending proposal to appropriate for food nor all the large appropriations made by congress should be allowed to obscure what is at once a duty and an expediency of the individual having means to give. The urgency and great extent of the need for relief has naturally brought about an appeal to government, but the only practical method of preventing the adoption of excessive and ill-advised public measures is by the most enlightened and liberal private action. Private action for relief is a logical expression of a system of private enterprise, an essential investment in Americanism in its fundamental character. When a few years ago we were involved in a foreign war private patriotism and loyalty to the common cause were confidently appealed to and the response was generous and prompt. We are now engaged in a war which is our own, a war against destitution among our fellow citizens. This justifies a more generous response than that which all Americans gave in 1917, and it should especially be realized by those who have been able to prosper most under the American system that their contribution is a defense, the only efficient defense of that system.

The restoration of normal American prosperity must and will be brought about by economic forces at home and abroad. But its return can be retarded and postponed by ill-advised political measures which always are offered in times of economic reaction and general misfortune. American prosperity and material progress are founded upon the free initiative of the individual, upon private enterprise, and to overburden and unduly restrict this is injurious to all the people. To recognize this is not to counsel a policy of "let alone," of "wait and see." The conditions with which several millions of our people are afflicted cannot be met by explanations. They will be ameliorated either by recourse to government, which, except through proper expenditure for needed public improvements, is wasteful and politically demoralizing, or by the private initiative, wisely organized, upon which our whole American system is founded. The choice of alternatives cannot be evaded or even postponed.

IT SEEMS TO DEPEND.

Senator Schall of Minnesota recommended the nomination of Ernest A. Michel for a federal judgeship. The recommendation was sent to Attorney General Mitchell for an investigation of qualifications. Mr. Mitchell found that the candidate lacked some of the requirements laid down for the federal bench and reported against him. High ground was taken for this finding. Mr. Mitchell said that President Hoover's standard of judicial eligibility did not yield to political considerations and the suggestion that Mr. Michel's appointment would help the administration in Minnesota was wasted.

A correspondent in the Voice of the People has pointed out that Mr. Mitchell's confidence in this particular has survived experience which might impair it. In another instance the attorney general investigated the qualifications of a candidate recommended by the Kansas senators. He was Judge Richard J. Hopkins of the Kansas Supreme court, who had combined his judicial functions with the activities of a lecturer for the Anti-Saloon league. Mr. Mitchell, with a good show of reason, found that Judge Hopkins lacked qualifications in keeping with the high standards of the federal judiciary. The Kansas senators and the Anti-Saloon league served notice that there would be trouble in the senate if that decision stood. Within six months Mr. Mitchell had reëxamined the case and found that he was mistaken. Judge Hopkins was qualified. He was nominated and the nomination was confirmed.

There could not be any disguise of the instance as a surrender to the political influence of the Anti-Saloon league. Mr. Mitchell's faith in the impervious standard for judicial appointment may be regarded as wishful. It may be proof against certain kinds of political consideration, but there is little evidence that it can keep itself aloof from the desires of the Volstead act enthusiasts. The administration may be persuaded by now that it can gain nothing by trying to please the radicals. That would have been a good conjecture without any experience. The attachment to the prohibition zealots, however, appears to be unbroken.

SENATOR NYE'S EXPENSE ACCOUNT.

Senator Nye is interesting anew in one of the world's oldest comedies—that of putting the lighted firecracker in his own pocket, smoking the loaded cigar he had intended for another, or stepping under the bucket of water he had rigged above the door. Senator Moses found a chance to introduce the Nye committee expense account into the Congressional Record and Senator Nye confesses that for an hour he was speechless, not because he had nothing to say, but because he had too much.

The amount spent by the committee since April in interference in state primaries and in rough riding candidates for the senate was $96,503. Other persons' expense accounts have been Senator Nye's favorite dish. He was indignant when Senator Moses served him his own. The Nye committee has been a new and particular impertinence of the United States senate. It assumed and exercised the privilege of censorship over the rights of voters in various states. It asserted the prerogative of rejecting credentials because candidates spent money in conducting their campaigns. To invite this censorship it was not necessary that the candidate be disreputable or that the campaign methods be dishonest. Turpitude is defined by the committee. The purpose has been to take the free election of senators away from some of the largest states and substitute dictation by a group of senators.

The candidates have used private funds in their campaigns. Mr. Nye has used public money in interference with state and individual rights. The publication of his committee's expense account cannot be regarded as a political outrage directed at his reputation. Mr. Nye apparently thinks it is, but public considerations require a much better understanding of what this strange body of censors and inquisitors is doing and how it is being done.

SHAW AND THE REPORTERS.

[New York World.]

George Bernard Shaw, it is announced, may come here as the guest of the Irish theater. He has done a number of things lately that he never did before: consented to the publication of his letters to Miss Terry, sold a play to the talkies, even acted in the talkies. The thing is quite possible. And for our part we hope it turns out to be true, if for no reason other than to see the ship reporters at last get a man to their liking. They have been having a hard time lately, what with visitors who either had no comment to make or preferred not to make it. But they will have no trouble with Shaw on either of these scores. He not only has plenty to say but dearly loves to say it. No question will remain unanswered once he faces the pack; no phase of life, from American women to the future of communism, from the sky line to slavery in Liberia, will remain undiscussed, and no picture will remain untaken. Not since Wilde will so glib a fellow have descended on these shores, and it will be a great day for the boys who go down on the cutter to quarantine and ride back to the dock on ship. Our only fear is that there will be no end to it. It is entirely within the possibilities that Shaw will like it so well he will borrow the tug Macom, ride down to quarantine and do it all over again.

MOTTLED TEETH.

A SMALL town in Arkansas, Bauxite, has been having an interesting experience. As the name implies, the principal industry of this town is extracting certain ingredients from soil beds and making them into bauxite and bauxite products. The industry is controlled by one organization. It is a typical one industry town. The people used water from shallow domestic wells before the industry came and for several years thereafter. The company wanted to protect its employés from the typhoid and diarrheal diseases, incidentally protecting themselves, and they put in a community water supply, digging a deep well, thus getting a water which health experts said did not spread typhoid and never would. The people abandoned their old wells, hooked up with the public supply, and everybody was happy.

But soon somebody noticed that his teeth were peculiar in appearance. He went to his dentist. The dentist was perplexed. He never had seen anything like that. Then others came. Then the flood broke. The dentist had read about mottled enamel. He became suspicious. He called on the health authorities and, finally, the United States public health service was called in. Drs. Kempf and McKay arrived on the scene.

They found that all the children who had used water from this deep well during the years when their permanent teeth were being formed had spotted enamel. All who through this period of their lives had consumed water from the shallow wells or from other sources had escaped. No variation in food made any difference. In nearby Benton all conditions of life were the same as in Bauxite except the water supply. There was no spotted enamel in Benton. When the company abandoned the deep well and pumped water four miles from Benton new cases of spotted enamel came to an end.

That the cause lay in the water from this deep well is certain, but up to date no cause has been found, though more than one kind of an analysis has been made. In other communities where mottled enamel has appeared changing the water supply has stopped the disorder.

STUTTERING SUGGESTION.

R. P. writes: May I offer a suggestion to the party who wrote you regarding stuttering? I stuttered up to the age of 18. I think that in most cases no outside help is needed—that is, it is up to oneself to become cured. I avoided talking as much as possible when I was young and was always glad when the teacher did not call on me to recite. I know now this made my condition worse. When I was about 17 I decided that if I would concentrate on talking more, even when it was not necessary, I could talk much better, and from then on I made it a point to say as much as possible, no matter how foolish my words were. In this way I became cured. I made up my mind to converse as much as possible, thereby avoiding the scare that comes to the average stutterer when he finds it necessary to answer a question.

SNORING IN LATER YEARS.

A. M. O. writes: Why is it that a woman of 50, who has never in her life snored, but always breathed so quietly while sleeping that she couldn't be heard, now snores horribly? She wakes up gasping, with her tongue stuck to the roof of her mouth.

REPLY.

NO RETURN PRIVILEGE.

Chicago, Jan. 16.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I had a radio installed in my car. I paid no money down, but signed a chattel mortgage on my car and am to make monthly payments. The radio has proved very unsatisfactory and would like to know if I can return it. If I do so can they still hold me to the mortgage? O. E. J.

The mere fact that the radio is unsatisfactory does not give you any legal remedy. You would have to prove, in addition, that the agreement was such as to give you a remedy on these facts or that there was affirmative misrepresentation at the time of sale. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

RAPID TRANSIT.

Chicago, Jan. 18.—[Friend of the People.]—I understand that the elevated company is to put in a third track fast trains west of the present two Humboldt and Logan Square tracks as a part of their "World's Fair" program.

We would like to know the time of same. S. W.

The ordinance passed by the city council on May 19, 1930, provides that the new company—the Chicago Local Transportation company—after acceptance of the ordinance and acquisition of the properties of the Rapid Transit and Surface Lines, would extend the Humboldt Park branch from its present terminus at Lawndale avenue to North Austin avenue, and the Logan Square branch from the present terminus at Logan Square northwest in or near Milwaukee avenue to Lawrence avenue, and would add such additional express tracks as are necessary.

The ordinance does not specify any priority as respects the many extensions of Rapid Transit and Surface lines which it is proposed would be made. The question as to which would be first would be determined by the local transit commission when it is organized. H. M. LYTLE, Vice President, Chicago Rapid Transit company.

FIREARMS.

Cicero, Ill., Jan. 16.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Is it necessary to obtain a permit to purchase and maintain a small arm for home or business protection, or for sporting purposes? 2. The state law requires a record be kept of all purchasers by dealers. If one obtains said article from a dealer in another state is the record kept in that state? 3. Or does the delivering agency turn in the record to the state in which the purchaser lives? 4. Does the act of purchasing an arm from a dealer in another state infringe on the state code, and if there is any violation of any interstate commerce law, is it the dealer or the purchaser who is the aggressor? J. J.

1. Not necessarily. Depends on additional facts.
2. Depends on the law of that state.
3. Ordinarily not.
4. No. You should bear in mind that the law prohibits carrying concealed weapons. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

IT LOOKS BAD FOR HITCH-HIKERS.

Well, one thing, this Butler row is going just about to ruin hitch-hiking. Cornelius Vanderbilt was riding in Mussolini's car as a guest when he says the thing happened that is now the sensation of two worlds. The next time we're touring around the country and see a man standing at the side of the road wigwagging his fingers for a lift we're just going to step on the gas and send old 799 past at three miles a minute. We like to do a kindness to our fellow man, but that hitch-hiker might turn out to be Cornelius Vanderbilt, and we wouldn't want to be taking chances.

To date hitch-hiking has been one of the bigger and better rackets, indulged in by many college boys and girls and all kinds of nice people, who found it much cheaper to beg rides in other people's autos than to buy gas for their own or pay fare on the choo-choo cars. But Mussolini says the unhappy incident described by his guest never happened and we'd be afraid that the hitch-hiker we picked up instead of being properly grateful for his ride would be telling people that we'd run down seven civil war veterans and a couple of one-legged blind men. Which would not be so good. No, hitch-hikers, don't blame us, blame Cornelius Vanderbilt, if he is the one who gave out the story about Il Duce. We're going to have a heart of stone when it comes to giving you a free ride for fifty or a hundred miles after this. From now on we bet hitch-hikers will have to do lots more hiking than they do hitching.

POOH FOR SENEGAMBIA.

(Verse for Bootleggers and Other Americans.)

In far off Senegambia, in ancient Senegambis,
They have an honored custom there, a highly honored custom there—
But here's the very truth of it, the truth of it I'm here to swear,

They think the deed miraculous, aye, so these far off people think,

Right here in our America, where live enlightened men and true,
We do this little stunt of theirs, this stunt of theirs we calmly do,

We swig our swigs of poison stuff, and swigging it serenely snort:

SAM'L.

GEN. BUTLER has a fine record as a fighting man and we would all hate to see the court martial visit any condign punishment on him. Perhaps a general army order requiring all army and marine officers to wear their gas masks when making after dinner speeches would be sufficient. And possibly it might be well to require Gen. Butler to wear two gas masks and his tin helmet.

BUT WE CANNOT believe that Gen. Butler said Mussolini ran over a child and kept going. If the general had told that story he would have had Il Duce driving over two hundred orphans, seventy-five inmates of an old people's home, and three Sunday school picnics.

AND, BESIDES, the banquet where Gen. Butler is supposed to have told that story about Mussolini was in Philadelphia. Hevvin's sake! Mussolini, nobody over here gets excited about anything that happens in Philadelphia. It's hard for us to believe that anything ever happens in Philadelphia.

ANYHOW, the Butler-Mussolini thing has put Philadelphia right back on the map again. Philadelphia does wake up now and then with something that jars the nation and then turns over and goes back to sleep. The Declaration of Independence, back in 1776, did a lot for the town, but the excitement finally died down until the Centennial Exposition in 1876. After that nothing was heard of the place until Al Capone was put in a Philadelphia jail. Everybody finally forgot about that, but now comes the insult to Mussolini. And when this is over—well, it may be twenty-five or fifty years in the future, but something is going to happen in Philadelphia again some day. You see.

"IT'S ALL DAMNED NONSENSE," declared Gen. Smedley D. Butler, "that a soldier shouldn't hold public office." Granted, general, granted; the question, as we understand it, is whether a general of marines should be turned loose at banquets.

BUT THE COURT MARTIAL ordered for Gen. Butler is going to make him the most talked about man in the world. And, gee! How he dreads it!

LAGNIAPPE.

YOUNG CORNELIUS VANDERBILT, the authority for the story that Gen. Butler told, has nothing to say. Funny how these fellows that are so talkative before the row starts are so very quiet afterwards.

"PLEASE communicate to the federal government," says Mr. Mussolini, "that I consider closed the incident." Mabel, throw the cow over the fence some hay. R. H. L.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

JANUARY 31, 1915.

LONDON.—The German submarine blockade of the British isles is in full effect. Three British merchantmen, one of them the Bencuachen, have been torpedoed and sunk by the German submarine U-21 off Fleetwood in the Irish sea. The crews were rescued by trawlers. One of the other steamers sunk was the Linda Blanche.

LONDON.—The Germans are bringing up masses of reinforcements to the positions they hold near Soissons and La Bassee, and it is probable that a great battle will be opened at both places simultaneously. The French official statement admits that the French have been forced to give way before the Germans in the fighting in the Argonne region, but says the German gains were made at enormous cost.

PETROGRAD.—Three Russian armies are now advancing upon the strongly fortified German seaport of Koenigsburg. Developments of a new offensive south of the railroad leading from Insterburg to the East Prussia capital was indicated in dispatches from the front. The Germans are hurrying reinforcements into East Prussia and hasty preparations are being made to attempt to halt the advance of the Russians, now less than fifty-five miles from the fortress.

CHICAGO.—A gift of $100,000 as a nucleus of a pension and sick benefit fund for the musicians of the Chicago Symphony orchestra was announced at the orchestra concert. The gift is made by Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, daughter of Albert A. Sprague, who is one of the oldest patrons of the orchestra. The announcement was made by Vice President Hamill of the orchestral association.

PEKING.—The plan of the commander in chief, Field Marshal von Waldersee, for the evacuation of Peking and other places now held by the allied troops was sent to the foreign ministers. He says that before the change can be undertaken the Chinese will have to make a start at least toward fulfilling the conditions of the peace treaty. He says it will be impossible to withdraw the troops before March because of the frozen condition of the rivers and harbors and the lack of transports.

BALTIMORE.—Caged and chained animals to the number of 150 perished in a fire which destroyed Frank C. Bostock's zoo in the Cyclorama building. The fire broke out just a few minutes after the close of the evening's performance and the spectators, who were fewer than usual because of bad weather, were in the aisles. There was a rush for the exits, but the smallness of the crowd prevented any serious injuries in the panic.

ANTHONY, Kas.—The Carrie Nation crusade reached Anthony at an early hour today when fourteen women, all belonging to the best families of this city, led by a Mrs. Sheriff of Danville, Kas., armed with axes, hatchets and club, visited four saloons, smashed the windows, mirrors, bars and fixtures and emptied all the liquor they could find into the streets.

WASHINGTON.—The proposition is made that the government shall fit out a naval relief expedition to go in search of the missing Jeannette and the whalers in the Arctic sea, from whom nothing has been heard since last year.

SOCORRO, N. M.—Victorio's band of Apaches has risen in their might and declared that no prospectors shall be allowed in the Black range or Magdalenas, where precious metals abound. A party under Col. J. M. Robinson was attacked at Chloride Creek cañon and two men were killed. At San Marcial, twenty miles south of this place, two men and two women were murdered by the red devils. In all, about 25 persons have been killed by the savages, not more than from two to four persons at a time.

CHICAGO.—The Scandinavian Free Thinkers' society celebrated the twelfth anniversary of its organization and the one hundred and forty-fourth anniversary of the birth of Tom Paine in a hall at 228 Milwaukee avenue with a large attendance.

THE FAT OF THE LAND.

Every one is wondering how to bring back prosperity—well, believe it or not, I can tell you.

Bring back into fashion the plump woman. The craze for starvation, as practiced by the women, has hit every industry in the country with the exception of the lettuce and spinach growers. It has filled the divorce courts. It has ruined children's lives. It has caused death and broken down the moral fiber of countless girls. Hanging is too good for its sponsors. JASON NALLIS.

A WIDOW'S PENSION.

Elmhurst, Ill., Jan. 23.—It made my blood fairly boil yesterday when one of my neighbors whose husband died six months ago applied for a widow's pension for her three fatherless children at the Wheaton courthouse and was rejected. This good woman has no means and no relatives to help her. She has a very small equity in her little home, here where she is trying to keep her family together. She was told at the courthouse yesterday that because she has not been a resident of Du Page county for three years she is not entitled to the widows' pension, although she was born, raised, educated, and reared her family in Chicago prior to her moving here six months ago. This means she has lived all this time in the same state of Illinois and is still living in it. MRS. MATT W. MALONE.

WARM HEARTED.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—While working in my district I came across a family of nine people who were in a deplorable condition with no food, coal, or gas and the city about to shut off the water. The father [a building trades mechanic] has been out of work for more than a year. After I left their house I went to the Jefferson Park police station, reported the case, and within one hour they brought a big basket of the best food right to the home.

This food was purchased by these good men voluntarily with their own money. I think we have the finest men in the whole world on our police force. HELEN DONOHUE, Census Taker.

LYLE.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—THE TRIBUNE, presumably for want of a more desirable candidate with whom it might with some degree of propriety align itself, is undoubtedly in a heavy campaign to saddle Chicago with Judge (the great) Lyle as mayor. When the people, by the usual tedious and costly course of experience, learn how easily this noisy judge vacates judgments after he has pronounced them, there may be some sorry reflections upon the trustworthiness of newspapers in forming and leading public opinion. R. W. F.

MILK IN ELGIN.

Elgin, Ill., Jan. 26.—People of this city are wondering when the price of milk is to be reduced here. It is now 12 cents for quarts and 7 for pints, as for a year or two past. When it was 11 cents the farmers got an increase of less than a cent a quart, but the price to consumers was promptly advanced a cent. Within a year or two the producers have taken two reductions. The recent one gives the farmers in this area $2.32 per hundred for their milk. This is slightly under 5 cents a quart. There's a big difference between 5 and 12 cents. Elgin people wonder why Milwaukee gets milk for 10 cents and Waukesha for 9, when there is no reduction here. It has been several times suggested that a pooling arrangement could be worked out so the delivery would not be so expensive, as the numerous drivers would not be crossing each other's paths every few rods, but nothing has come of it. Is it more profitable to the milkmen to hold on their customers with a cumbersome and antiquated plan of distribution than to work out a better system? All have the same price, so there is no competition. A few years ago a man started to supply milk here at a cut price and had a nice plant for his business, but he was bought off or at any rate soon put out of commission. ELGINITE.

THE ECONOMICS OF THE BONUS.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—Mr. Mellon says that money for payment in cash of the soldiers' bonuses can be raised only by bond issue and that a government bond issue would divert money available for investment from industrial enterprises, thereby impeding economic recovery. Does he overlook the fact that putting money from soldiers' bonuses into circulation would, to a certain extent, increase the buying power of the public?

Lack of customers to buy what they produce, more than lack of capital on which to operate, is what is causing enterprises to cut down employment, thus creating hard times. MARY BROWDER.

HUSH!

Chicago, Jan. 23.—It is my earnest hope that you will not play up the seeming prevalence of colds and influenza. Write it up if you must, but in some obscure section of the paper. Let your reading public begin to concentrate on influenza and talk influenza and think influenza, and we will have the inevitable result—influenza. CONSTANT READER.

CONFISCATION.

Chicago, Jan. 26.—Why not confiscate the properties of our "enemies within" such as panders, bootleggers, and gangsters instead of merely coaxing them to pay income tax on illegitimately obtained income? H. E. GATES.

Hecht's Latest Book Employs Satiric Method

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"A Jew in Love," by Ben Hecht. [Covici Friede.]

From the choice of his title to the last line of the book, Ben Hecht follows a straight path of satiric exposé of one subject in his latest novel. He is never veered from that path by any allurements of style, manner or subject. He is concerned with the actions and reactions of a Jew in love — with nothing else. A less preoccupied novelist would have built up the causes of the special psychology which his hero possesses, would have shown that psychology in interrelation with other phases of his existence.

The few pages in which the hero is concerned with his mother, his father and his sister, with the brother of his mistress or everyday living, are so slight as to shed no light whatever upon Jo Bosshere as a man of business or ordinary social affairs. The author dives deep, however, into his life and psychology as a man of affaires de coeur.

Jo Bosshere, depicted as a publisher, is successful, not because of books either good or popular, but because, having made a fortune on the stock market, he has chosen to spend his money in the book business. But, as far as the author is concerned, he might have been a successful ice cream vendor or manufacturer of wheelless baby carriages. Jo Bosshere the lover, not Jo Bosshere the publisher, is the hero of "A Jew in Love."

There is a keen analysis of a strange persecutor in Jo Bosshere. His passion was for complete possession of the souls of the women—and the men—whom he found interesting. To gain that he tortured even himself. Having gained it, his interest was touched with satiety. It was a form of spiritual debauch which Mr. Hecht has pictured with minute probing. Psychic possession was his goal, physical possession his means. The book is concerned with his relations with three women—his wife, whom he kept hidden on trans-Atlantic liners, but who emerged now and again for a season of passion and recrimination; his mistress who loved him; Tillie whom he loved. A husband and wife are consumed, gobbled up physically as if they were a giant's feast. All the characters in the book have that same anomalous position both in relation to the hero and to the author. Mr. Hecht sees his characters being crammed into his hero's psychic maw with as obvious delight as the hero does the cramming.

Most of the book consists in minute descriptions of the love passages between the hero and his women. The book has a certain power, but it is strangely monotonous. As a documentation of an abnormal psychology it has a definite strength, but it lacks the fictional reality which only a rounded picture of life can give.

Nowhere in the book has one any sense of the characters' relation to life—only his or her relation to—shall we say love? Sex would perhaps be more exact.

Mr. Hecht has set down a devastating satire.

"A Jew in Love" is Mr. Hecht's first novel in four years. He still is the same writer who has, since his start, given his readers a sense of tremendous power, somehow missing its own goal and the goal of any real distinction.

MORE SCIENTISTS SIMPLIFY STORY OF WORLD AND MANKIND

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—An interesting feature of the London Observer in these days is a series of interviews with famous scientists, in which men like Sir Arthur Eddington, H. G. Wells, and Sir James Jeans are persuaded to express their views upon the present and the future of man and his universe.

J. W. N. SULLIVAN.

The interviewer is one who has no superior in this sort of inquiry, for he is J. W. N. Sullivan, friend of Aldous Huxley, Middleton Murry, and other members of the group of men who used to contribute to the Athenæum when it was edited by Mr. Murry. Mr. Sullivan is a most interesting personality, as Dr. Einstein discovered when he first came to England. Mr. Sullivan, in fact, was above all others the man with whom Dr. Einstein found that he could really exchange ideas.

His style is not especially graceful; but he is one of the few men who, knowing something, can remember that their readers have not quite the same amount of knowledge, and can therefore explain the facts necessary to an understanding of the subject. His interviews are excellent; the questions he puts are both tactful and suggestive; and he seriously comprehends the answers made by the great scientists. I have no doubt that these interviews will be collected in book form, and in that case they should be of great interest and use to all who seek mental stimulation.

John Drinkwater has been demonstrating the fact that stamp collecting is not at all a contemptible hobby, as some would have us believe. He has just exhibited his important collection of stamps of the Confederate States of America to members of the Junior Philatelic society, and in doing this he delivered an address which illuminated the historic importance attaching to the stamps. When stamps can tell so absorbing and romantic a tale as this, the only marvel is that more collectors do not spread their albums across the world. It is well known that King George is an enthusiastic collector; but apart from Mr. Drinkwater I know of no author who has realized the importance of such a hobby.

Among the earliest books of the year is one which is clearly the result of somebody's bright idea. It is called "If—It Had Happened Otherwise! or Lapses Into Imaginary History," and a number of ingenious writers have been called upon to contribute to it. Winston Churchill heads the list—very suitably—but Gilbert Chesterton, Hilaire Belloc, André Maurois, Father Ronald Knox, and Philip Guedalla are [among others] not far behind. The book promises well, if only the authors have not tried to be too funny or propagandist. But one misses a few names, of which the chief is that of Mr. Wells, among English writers, and, among Americans, John Erskine.

Gene Markey's Story, "The Road to Rouen," Reappears as Book

"The Road to Rouen," by Gene Markey [Day], is a gay whiff about the momentous meeting of a lady who was an irresistible force of beauty and allure and a gentleman who was that most immovable of all objects the Great Lover. They met in the country house of the man's friend and the woman's fiancé in Deauville.

The shattered pieces of the inevitable explosion were picked up in a little inn on the road to Rouen. A short story which appeared in a dressy magazine now is a smart little volume all to itself. Gene Markey used to live in our town and, as Edna Ferber used to say, looked like the prince of Wales. For some years now he has been one of the princes of Hollywood.

Arabian Nights tales about him seep back to us. That's why the inscription he put in the front of our copy of "The Road to Rouen," which we read on one of the north pole days, gave us a nice clean laugh. "From the Poor Exile" it said!

Fannie Hurst Talks About Making Novels

Writing Is Work, Says Author of Many.

BY ALTA MAY COLEMAN.

NEW YORK.—[Special correspondence]—Some writers are brilliant conversationalists; others are comparatively inarticulate. Talking and writing, which at first thought might seem the same, are quite different arts. With Fannie Hurst self-expression is by no means limited to her books. Her conversation is characterized by humor, penetration, a wide range of interests and knowledge of the world, and a fluid exactitude of word. Miss Hurst is, too, an able public speaker, which many excellent conversationalists are not.

FANNIE HURST.

Last week Miss Hurst's latest novel, her sixth, we believe, was released. This week finds "Back Street" placed on the best seller list by the public, and greeted with praise by reviewers. Despite this alluring success it will lack one reader. As Miss Hurst will tell you, novelists do not enjoy reading their own novels, they are eternally disappointed, the pleasure of their work comes in the vision that procedes the concrete form, the lure of their work is "Next time."

The work of writing is not a pleasure— it's work. But the torment of working is as nothing to the torment of not working. With writers as with other mortals life's keenest interest is in attempting. One's sense of humor gives a solacing perspective. But beware of laughing at yourself too much; it is possible for humor to reduce work to such triviality that it ceases to seem worth doing at all.

This is what Miss Hurst said, but not how she said it. Without stenographic record one cannot convey her light seriousness. She lives in a spacious apartment on Central Park West. She likes living in New York but is an ardent and impulsive traveler, decides on distant ports one day and starts the next. She reads extensively, her pet interest—no, you won't guess it—is science.

Each year she goes abroad she takes courses at Oxford. She doesn't like Hollywood—what writer does? She was born in Hamilton, O., reared in St. Louis, is a graduate of Washington university, sold her first short story to William Marion Reedy's Mirror, is married to Jacques Danielson, the musician. She has just returned from a fortnight in Cuba; her next novel is in the happy vision station, planned but not yet begun. She can work anywhere she sets up her typewriter, and her next overseas jaunt may take her to India.

At Mr. and Mrs. Hershel Brickell's tea on Sunday afternoon, the guests of honor were Frances Tinker and Edward Larocque Tinker, co-authors of "Old New Orleans," a set of four romances announced as the second publication of the series which Appleton's started with Edith Wharton's "Old New York." At this party we gathered further evidence that the gayety of authors as their latest book comes from the press is caused by the fact they are in the happy vision state regarding the next.

Martha Ostenso in planning the successor to "Waters Under the Earth"—"it will be in lighter, gayer mood," she says.

Isa Glenn will follow "A Short History of Julia" by a story of New York locale.

Irving Fineman has his next half done.

Will Irwin is doing this and that for magazines in what time he can spare from watching the new copyright bill.

Siegfried and Buffalo Vie for Boys' Favor

BY AGATHA L. SHEA.

"Thistle Inn," by Katherine Adams [Macmillan].

Among the attractive books of interest to young people are Edith Heal's "Siegfried" [Rockwell], Wynant Alan Hubbard's "Bong-Kwe" [Doubleday-Doran], that fine story of a buffalo, and Katherine Adams' new story of the days of Prince Charlie which she has entitled "Thistle Inn" [Macmillan]. Miss Heal in her rendering of the story of the popular hero of the northland has drawn upon the various sources of the epic, desiring to present Siegfried neither as of the Rhineland nor of the north, but rather as he appeared to both peoples.

Incidents found in the Scandinavian saga, the German ballad of "Siegfried of the Horny Skin," the Nibelungenlied and other sources have been combined in the telling, and the result is a story marked by virility and romance. The book is very attractive with illustrations by Milo Winter. Miss Heal is a Chicagoan.

Mr. Hubbard's "Bong-Kwe" is an exceedingly fascinating book for the young reader of high school age. It is the life story of a buffalo on the African plains from the day of his birth to that of his last great struggle against his enemy, man. The story is told by the veteran hunter who, by chance, witnessed the birth of the calf, and whom fate decreed was to be, years later, the dealer of the death wound to the mighty Bong-Kwe, leader of the herd. It is a thrilling tale and in it the author, who is a famous student of animals, has presented a marvelous picture of the facts of animal life in the jungle and on the plains.

"Thistle Inn" by Katherine Adams is a story woven about Bonnie Prince Charlie and his adherents, and deals with the attempt of the prince to rally his supporters about him. Two young Scotch girls, Elspeth and Cherry, fired by their love for the prince of their country, enlist in his service and many are the dangers which they meet as they ride through the night in his behalf.

Although one cannot help but feel that the parts the girls play are somewhat unreal, the story is one of rich historical background and vibrant with the thrills and enthusiasm of youth. It is marked by that excellence of literary style which has made Katherine Adams one of the outstanding authors of fine stories for girls for many years.

THE MODERN LIBRARY REVIVES BOOKS AS AUTHORS ISSUE OTHERS

There are three spectacular examples of the Modern Library's publishing an old and famous book by an author simultaneously with the publication of a new one which is certain to be popular. [The Modern Library at 95 cents is one of the best bargains in the whole business of book publishing, by the way.] Simultaneously with the publication of "Cakes and Ale," by Somerset Maugham, the Modern Library published the best novel he ever wrote and one of the greatest works of modern English prose, "Of Human Bondage."

When Arnold Bennett's "Imperial Palace" was published, his greatest novel was added to the Modern Library list, "The Old Wives' Tale."

In December two new Rockwell Kent books were sponsored by the Book of the Month Club and the Literary Guild, "N by E," the record of his trip to Greenland, illustrated by himself, and "Moby Dick," the Melville classic, illustrated by Rockwell Kent.

The Modern Library published, with a new introduction, Rockwell Kent's own story of his trip around the coast of South America, "Wilderness," with all the drawings used in the earlier $6 edition.

Headed by Cardinal Mundelein, forty-four Chicagoans, including university professors, scientists, business leaders, social workers, and economists contributed the results of research in their respective fields to the new World Book Encyclopedia which recently was published in Chicago with Prof. M. V. O'Shea of the University of Wisconsin as editor-in-chief.

Five members of the faculty of the University of Chicago are included in the list of local contributors, including Prof. William Warren Sweet of the Divinity school; Prof. Albert Johannsen of the geology department; Katherine Elizabeth Dopp, philosophy department, and Annas Higgins, University college, and Prof. Robert Woellner, principal of University High school. Two professors from Northwestern university, Prof. Edward Howard Hatten, pathology department, and Prof. Arthur Kendall of the medical department, also contributed.

Other Chicago experts who have assisted Prof. O'Shea in compiling the new encyclopedia, are: Carl B. Roden, librarian, Chicago public library; Berthold Laufer, curator, Field museum; Dr. William S. Sadler, director, Chicago Institute of Research and Diagnosis, and Dr. William A. Evans, health editor, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

"The new World Book Encyclopedia," says Prof. O'Shea, "has been compiled to show how modern discovery is influencing human life socially, politically, physically, and morally."

The new encyclopedia, according to its Chicago publishers, cost more than $1,000,000 to compile and represents ten years of research. There are fourteen thousand illustrations in the twelve volumes.

Sales 25% Above Those of Year Ago.

BY HAL FOUST.

Automobiles with a total value of approximately $2,500,000 have been sold in Chicago during the seven days of the 31st National Automobile show, according to Sam A. Miles, general manager. The sales have exceeded last year's show by twenty-five per cent and have broken all records with the single exception of the 1928 exhibition.

Today is the last day of the 1931 show. The doors of the Coliseum will be open from 10 a. m. to 10:30 p. m. The total attendance from last Saturday until last night exceeded 200,000, which is also greater than last year's figure.

It is estimated that orders have been taken for 1,670 motor cars during the show. The average price was around $1,500.

"There are no sales statistics on the show," said Mr. Miles. "Many of the contracts are signed days later in dealers' offices. It's a rough estimate, gained from conversations with most of the exhibitors, that the sales developed at the show will total between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000."

Automobile executives who have been assembled in Chicago for a week were checking out of hotels yesterday, boarding trains for the manufacturing towns. The majority of them felt that the sales of the last week justified a moderate degree of optimism.

"Business seems to be coming back," said the president of one of the large companies. "The public is buying automobiles. I look for a gradual improvement in business through 1931."

Production Is Stepped Up.

Back in the automobile factory towns, production schedules are being stepped up to meet the new demands from the public. The revival of buying is not limited to Chicago. Favorable sales reports are being received from all over the country.

The automobile plants, in addition to enrolling more workers, are increasing their orders for parts and material, for steel, rubber, glass, leather, copper, lumber and cotton fabric. These orders, in turn, are putting more men to work. Directly and indirectly, the automobile industry in normal times supports a tenth of America's salaried population. It is the nation's largest industry.

"I've heard too many wild predictions during the last sixteen months to lend my name to a business forecast," said another automobile executive as he was packing his grip to return to Detroit, "but it's my private opinion that this upturn in motor car sales marks the beginning of the end of the buyers' strike that caused the depression."

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: Discovery

ARGENTINE GANG CHIEF WEEPS AT DEATH SENTENCE

Five Persons Killed in Crime War.

BY HAROLD TATAM.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 30.—A court martial this morning condemned Severino de Giovanni, gangster leader, to death at dawn tomorrow and the sentence was confirmed by the president, Gen. José Uriburu. The gangster was captured last night after a battle in which a policeman and a girl, 13 years old, were killed.

De Giovanni's spirit of bravado finally broke down when he was taken in handcuffs before the court martial, for he burst into tears and pleaded for his life.

There was nothing relentless in the faces of the judges when sentence was passed, and De Giovanni began to scream: "I am too young to die! I don't want to die!" He virtually collapsed when sentenced.

Almost simultaneously with the court martial proceedings a strong detachment of police in an armored car went to the outlying suburb of Burzaco and surrounded the building where it was reported De Giovanni's gangsters were hiding. The police were received by a withering fire from revolvers, rifles, and machine guns, but they finally captured the entire band of 20.

Two of the bandits and one policeman were killed during the battle, which lasted half an hour. All of the bandits were armed with .45 calibre revolvers similar to the one used by De Giovanni. Several were wounded on both sides, some seriously.

JOSEPH KOCHLEY, CIVIL WAR VET, PIONEER, DEAD

Joseph A. Kochley, 83 years old, a pioneer resident of Naperville and veteran of the civil war, died at his home, 220 Jefferson street, Naperville, last night. He leaves a widow and a son, Joseph Jr., 8 years old. The boy is believed to be the youngest son of a civil war veteran in the country.

Mr. Kochley ran away to war when 15 years old, enlisting in the 156th Illinois volunteers, with which regiment he remained until the war was over.

Mr. Kochley was married when he was 71 years old. For years he was a member of the firm of Slick & Kochler. He took a prominent part in civic affairs. The funeral will be held Monday at 9:30 a. m. from the SS. Peter and Paul church, Naperville.

Despite her illness, Queen Ioanna made her husband's birthday present on her sickbed with her own hands. The knitted sweater which she gave him seemed to please him more than some of his more costly gifts.

AUTOIST LOSES HERO LAURELS IN COURTSHOWDOWN

William May, 30 years old, 7209 South Sangamon street, who was arrested after an automobile accident in which he was pictured by Russell Wiles Jr., radio engineer, as a frustrated robber, was freed as innocent yesterday in the Grand Crossing court.

May was injured by Wiles' machine on Jan. 5. Wiles, arraigned before Judge Borrelli for reckless driving, was praised as a hero and discharged when he testified he hurled May to the pavement by swerving his car when May leaped aboard in a robbery attempt. Miss Margaret Van Benschoten, 6618 Kimbark avenue, Wiles' companion, told a similar story. Later May was arrested.

The case was heard yesterday by Judge Howard Hayes. May testified he was crossing Woodlawn avenue at 67th street when Wiles struck him down. He denied leaping aboard Wiles' machine. Jack Wiley, 6547 Woodlawn avenue, a civil engineer, a witness, testified to the same effect and added that Wiles was driving zigzag down the street. Two other witnesses testified and Judge Hayes discharged May.

The motions now pending ask that the state furnish the defense a complete list of names and addresses of its witnesses, that the defense be permitted to examine certain hotel records in the possession of the prosecution, and that prosecution counsel for the trial be restricted.

After the hearing yesterday Defense Attorneys Tyrrell Krum and Louis Piquett asked Judge Prystalski for permission to take a woman to see Brothers in the lockup. The judge refused the request, saying that it was against the rules. The attorneys refused to divulge the identity of the woman.

ERIN LOOKS WITH SATISFACTION ON RESULTS OF 1930

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 30.—An optimistic statement on conditions in the Irish Free State, indicating a healthy state of industrial and agricultural confidence, has been issued by the government in summarizing the year 1930. Sounder faith in economic prospects as indicated by increasing exports, rising credit, and a decline in the indebtedness of the unemployment fund are cited in the report.

Government stock at the closing of the year stood at a premium of 7 per cent, the announcement states, and points to the issuance of $1,250,000 in agricultural loans by a bond issue which was oversubscribed within an hour by investors in the Free State.

Ireland stood among the only ten countries of the world which showed an increase in exports. They were greater there by $7,500,000 to $18,750,000 than in 1929.

Quality Is Improved.

"The fall in prices of agricultural produce," says the report, "has been partly offset by the improved quality and standardized grading of the exports. Live stock has not been subjected to the drastic price fall of other agricultural products and the continued complete immunity of the Irish Free State from foot and mouth disease has contributed negatively but considerably to support the Irish live stock trade which, valued in exports at $90,000,000, is the most valuable single commodity exported from the Irish Free State. In 1930 the exports of cattle increased by 9 per cent, more than counterbalancing the lower prices obtained for butter and eggs."

The nine other countries joining the Free State with an increase in exports, according to the statement, were Russia, Latvia, Jugo-Slavia, Lithuania, Rumania, Palestine, Hungary, Spain, and Algeria.

Legislation to standardize and improve the quality of exported products is cited, notably a law guiding slaughtering and preparation of meat for shipment abroad. Another act noted rigidly controls exported eggs. Bad eggs found in a consignment result in the return, shipment postpaid, to the exporter of the entire allotment.

Tariffs enacted during the year were few, but served both to reduce unemployment and maintain a low cost of living, the statement declared.

Unemployment Drops.

The average number of registered unemployed fell by 50 per cent below the figures for 1922. "As the unemployment fund has a relatively small debt and is approaching solvency the government of the Irish Free State has decided to reduce substantially the contributions paid by employers and employés under the unemployment insurance scheme," the statement reads.

"The income tax is 15 per cent, and the maximum super-tax rate is 25 per cent less than that in force in the United Kingdom.

"The standard of living compares favorably with other agricultural nations. In necessaries the standard is higher than in Great Britain. The consumption of butter per person in the Irish Free State is 39 pounds per annum, 16 pounds in Great Britain, and 12 pounds in Denmark; while margarine is consumed to the extent of 3 pounds per head per annum in the Irish Free State, 13 pounds in Great Britain, and 46 pounds in Denmark."

AUSTRALIANS TO FIGHT TO UPHOLD LIVING STANDARD

SYDNEY, Australia, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Plans to utilize the whole Australian industrial organization "to resist any attack on the workers' standard of living" are contemplated in action taken today at a conference of the Australian Council of Trades Unions.

$25,000 ASKED TO AID LINTON MINE VICTIMS' WIDOWS AND CHILDREN

Linton, Ind., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—The official inquiry to determine cause of the explosion in the Little Betty coal mine, west of Linton, which killed twenty-eight miners Wednesday, will be held Monday at the mine, with Walter McHugh, coroner of Sullivan county, in charge.

The list of dead was changed today to twenty-eight instead of twenty-nine when Fred Reed, one of those listed in the death report, was found to have suffered only slight injuries.

Carr said conditions in many homes indicated immediate relief necessary. Gov. Harry G. Leslie gave $1,000 from the state emergency fund and Joseph Haseman, president of the Greene county Red Cross chapter, pledged $2,000. The disaster left 17 widows and 48 fatherless children.

THE LONG LOOP

BY B. M. BOWER

SYNOPSIS.

Rhea Larrabee, head of Whistling Creek ranch, was swindled in an oil well frameup by Gram Gray, neighboring rancher and banker. Everything he owned, except the home ranch, was mortgaged. Dix, an orphan, keeps from his grandmother and his young brother, Chuck, the true state of affairs. Gram has her heart set on seeing Chuck a doctor. Chuck has expensive tastes and his indulgent older brother has a hard task paying for his college duffle and material demands.

Mari McGuire tempts Dix with the idea of changing the brand of the cattle from Gray's O T ranch to a coffeepot, symbol of Dix's own.

Tom, an Indian helper, discovers a lost valley with a geyser on the Coffeepot ranch. Only one passage leads to it, through what seems to be a blank cliff wall. It is an ideal hideout for cattle.

With vague misgivings Dix begins rustling from Gray's herd, hiding the stolen cattle in Lost Valley. A blizzard obliterates all traces of the crime. Another foray was made one night just before a rainstorm. Then Dix was ready to call quits, but Mart and Tom continued night riding on their own. After shipping time Dix's profits were more than he'd ever made before.

INSTALLMENT XII.

A SUDDEN HOMECOMING.

On a Wednesday morning in the middle of May an unmistakable holiday spirit prevaded the ranch. Instead of going off to their work after breakfast as they should have done, Mart and Dix betook themselves to the bunk house and proceeded with much careful preparation to cut each other's hair, while old Tom got out his can of bear's grease and oiled and combed and braided until his black head shone like a crow's wing. Then he put on a white shirt with blue silk stripes and tied a red necktie under his chin. His blue overalls were stiff with newness and the copper rivets at the pockets had a shine to match his hair. Then he went out to sit down in the sun and watch the trail to Graypoint.

From the kitchen there radiated a ravishing Christmas dinner odor and Gram's voice was hysterically shrill and querulous as she nagged at Minny.

"Better put a stick of wood in the stove. And skim the oil off that gravy; you've scorched it now till the gravy won't be fit for the pigs. Doctors are dead set against grease. And for conscience sake, hurry up and get the table set! That telegram said he'd arrive before noon, and it's nine o'clock right now. He'll be half starved when he gets here." For the twentieth time since breakfast Gram went to the door and stood gazing out into the valley, her palsied left hand all atremble against her breast.

"Seems to me I see a dust over beyond the shale ridge," she quavered nervously.

"Bimeby I settum."

stove wood which he dropped noisily into the big yellow painted box behind the big range.

Old Tom went down the path with his gliding, toed-in walk to open the gate for Chuck, whose sudden homecoming had so disrupted the family routine. But Dix was already running to the gate where a big, dusty yellow car with roped baggage wherever it was possible to find foothold for a bag was slowing to a stop. Dix jumped to the only free spot on the running board and clung to the door, grinning affectionate welcome, as the powerful machine purred on up the rutty road.

Mart stood at the corner of the corral with his thumbs thrust inside his belt and his hat tilted over one eye, looking as if he would rather be shot than show the emotion pent within him. He waved a casual greeting as Chuck yelled hello.

"Got some feller with him," he observed needlessly to Tom who had come to a stand beside him. "Wonder who. Some damn hitch hiker bummin' him for a ride, I reckon."

"We better git up there and help unload his stuff," Mart muttered, and started off, Tom's beaded flags twinkling in the sun as he followed doglike at Mart's heels. As they arrived at the porch Chuck whirled and caught a hand of each, gripped painfully and turned upon his goggled companion.

"Folks, this is Frosty. Whatever name he may have had back home, I never crossed the Mississippi. He's just Frosty and he's the flyinest fool that ever rode a cloud. I brought him out here to get a gulp of Wyoming air. Frosty, meet the family. This is my old Gram, and Dix here—you see now why I harped on my brother Dix all the way out here. Some boy, what? And this is Mart McGuire, the original Wyoming cowboy, what the movies learned their he-man stuff from. And Tom Rainy-Day—it's worth the trip just to meet Tom. And Minny—where art thou, Minerva? Come on out and meet Frosty the birdman, wanting to shake hands with the world's best cook, bar only Gram here."

Minny came waddling like a gigantic brown duck. Chuck saw to it that she shook hands nicely with Frosty, patted her on a fat cushioned shoulder, and pushed her giggling through the doorway. He turned then and for an instant stood sober, sending a clear-eyed, seeing glance around the little group and on out over the walled coulee which he had not seen for five years. His eyes returned for the second glance to Dix's face, held and clouded faintly, then swept on to Gram.

"Gram, you must wind the clock backwards or something," he said softly, his tone not quite matching the look in his eyes.

"Well, I've kept up pretty good till the last year or two," Gram admitted, blinking under the unaccustomed compliment. "This shaking in my hand and arm have bothered me considerable and I get kinda dizzy, faraway spells sometimes when I overdo. You'll have to use some of your college education to doctor me up, I guess."

"And how!" said Chuck, slipping his arm around her thin shoulder. But he did not smile when he said it. He lifted his head and sniffed violently toward the kitchen. "Turkey?" he guessed with eagerness. "Don't tell me it's roast turkey I smell!"

"No, it's goose." Gram chirped excitedly. "You always used to like roast goose better than anything else, so I had Tom kill me a nice young gander last night when Dixon got your telegram. I do hope you don't disapprove of roast goose, now you've got to be a doctor. I know it's awful rich—"

"Disapprove of roast goose! Me disapprove of roast goose? Lead me to it—that's all I can say; just lead me to that same roast goose."

Frosty, a tall, lean young man with aviator's goggles pushed up on his cap which he wore with the peak behind, gave a slight cough and glanced uneasily from face to face as if he were trying to find out something.

"Larry's been smelling roast goose all the way from Baltimore," he declared. "Positively, his nostrils have twitched like a bird dog in a wheat field."

Gram started to laugh. Chuck's glance met Dix's over her head as he picked the old woman up in his arms and carried her into the big kitchen. Her left arm slid around his tanned neck, her gray hair brushed his brown cheek. Chuck set her down inside and kissed her twice, his eyes ranging the room.

"Shush-shush. I think we better waft ourselves outa here again. The table board is still undressed, the angel of this domain——"

"For pity sake, Minny! Ain't you got the table set yet?" Gram returned to practical things with a jar.

Chuck took yard-long steps out of there, pushing the grinning Frosty before him. A moment later they were to be heard at the back of the house, alternately pumping the iron pump. From the kitchen high Argument issued.

"Yeah; I'll say. That's a forty-year war you hear. I grew up on it; Gram trying to boss Minny, and Minny doing exactly as she pleases. Well, what d'you think of my family? Pretty slick combination, eh? You wait till you get to really know Dix! He's the world's finest. I'm telling you now."

"Sure looks it. I like that boy. He's got the look of a flyer, did you notice? Turned up, what I mean. Take the air and ride 'er through. What'd he do in the war?

"That's what gives him the look of a flyer, I reckon. Difference in eyes, is all. There's a look in his eyes——"

"You get it, too?" Chuck leaned closer. "We'll have to take him in as a pal all out, Frosty. We can't cover up from Dix."

"Come eat, now," Minny announced, grinning, from the back door. And with a hurried toweling and more hasty manipulation of the comb he took from his pocket, Chuck led the way. Like two famished schoolboys, they went in to the feast.

Good Morning!

Never was the elegantly insouciant, delightfully ardent, gayly amusing Mr. Colman more at home than in this sparkling comedy drama. If you don't believe me just ease over to the United Artists' and listen to the fond, feminine laughter, the tender "Ah's" and the excited "Oh's" that wait upon his words, smiles, and gestures. Yesterday, during an episode with a little wire-haired terrier, in which he proves beyond a doubt that he is not only kind to animals, but that dogs are crazy about him, a wave of positive exultation submerged the house. The woman next to me—whom I had never seen before—nudged me heartily and said aloud, with the most unshakable conviction:

I hadn't said that Mr. Colman was bad—but I knew what she meant.

Well, anyway, as Willie Leeland, irresponsible son of a crotchety Lord Leeland, Mr. Colman is a charming fellow. He's a soldier of fortune, and life is just a gay song to him. He is auctioning his goods and chattels off in East Africa when the story opens, preparatory to returning to dear old England and the ancestral home that holds his father, sister, brother, and the regiment of family retainers.

In London there is an actress, Mary Crayle, whom Willie believes he loves pretty well. A nice girl and he does think a lot of her. But, lo, at his father's house he encounters a Dorothy Hope, engaged to marry a Grand Duke Paul, and THAT is the real thing! Beseech me not to tell you what happens to the grand duke and Mary, but things move verrie, verrie fast in that part of merrie, merrie England, where Willie Leeland breathes the air.

"The Devil to Pay" is beautifully staged and suavely mannered. The lines are witty and the story adroitly woven, with a couple of surprises spun in. The supporting cast plays up in great shape and sound, photography and direction are just what you think they should be.

"To get the news is my identity. To print the news is my creed," Mark Flint, managing editor of The Bulletin, speaking.

Throughout the picture's action he maintains his identity and lives up to his creed. Yea, verily, even when to do so lands tragedy and disaster smack on the doorstep of Mr. Mark Flint.

"Scandal Sheet" is a thriller that holds your attention because of some good acting, pat dialogue, and rather shrewd presentation. I will say, however, that you have a line of the general outcome of the story from the opening scenes, and that the film is weakened by an anti-climax. Also, I would advise you to take this photoplay with a grain of salt, and bear in mind that there is a heap more decency in the newspaper profession and many more newspaper men who hold the viewpoint of the publisher of The Bulletin than "Scandal Sheet" infers. Mark Flint is a type, of course; but not a common one.

Just the same, George Bancroft plays his character in convincing style. Nice to have this fine actor back among us again! Kay Francis, as Mrs. Flint, is her usual fascinating self. Clive Brook plays a banker who loves the lady, in his accustomed suave fashion and with his usual and, Newfoundland look. Gilbert Emery is a peach as the publisher, and other roles are adeptly handled. I should say AS adeptly as the story permits. The film is well staged and mostly photographed and recorded. Direction is superior to the scenario.

Gotham Rector Ridicules His Bishop's Views

Satirizes Manning for Notions About Stage.

New York, Jan. 30.—(AP)—By way of comment on their interest in stage censorship, the Rev. William Norman Guthrie, often reprimanded rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church of St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie, today paired his bishop, William T. Manning, with Cardinal Hayes as "the heavenly twin of blessed piety" and "the Protestant all highest" in his church bulletin.

"In the remote Bouwerie of the last Dutch governor of Nova Belgica," Dr. Guthrie wrote, "we are reached by a strange rumor to the effect that the 'cardinal,' in perfect theatrical costume, with bell, book and candle, crucifers and thurifers galore, miter, cope and crozier, will proceed superbly up and down Broadway, arm in arm with his heavenly twin of blessed piety, the 'Protestant' all highest, duly armed and guarded by squadrons of plain clothes men.

"From a special loggia, gay with interwoven papal and Protestant bunting, they will frown celestially on Manhattan's pleasures, damn and delete with gusto, to the tunes, respectively of 'Annie Rooney' and 'Home, Sweet Home,' the theater, not an anatomico-psychological museum of horrors but rather duly sprayed with eau de Cologne and decorated with all the sumptuous decorum of funerary parlors."

Farther on in his article Dr. Guthrie, who has been long and repeatedly under the disapproval of the bishop, suggests that "surely a committee of southwestern Bible belters should, in all fairness, be added, if only to exhibit American geographical Catholicity."

"Let Aristophanes and Shakespeare beware!" he adds.

Among the novelties will be a clock in airplane design with a whirling propeller to mark the passage of minutes; a straw dog, life size, made by French peasant boys;

Tetrazzini Sings for Charity, Gets Ovation in Florence

FLORENCE, Italy, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Luisa Tetrazzini came back to the scene of her first operatic triumph tonight to learn that Italians never forget the artists they have loved.

She answered the call of charity and emerged from her retirement to sing once again at the Verdi theater, where two generations ago she made her debut and won the hearts of all who heard her in the lead rôle of Meyerbeer's "Africana." Tonight every song of the former diva still golden.

Japanese Movies of Sound Waves Shown to Yankees

New York, Jan. 30.—(AP)—The fastest motion pictures ever taken, approximately 2,000 times as speedy as the present talking films, were exhibited today at the Museum of Science and Industry. They depicted the reaction of air and sound waves to interference.

ASIA'S WOMEN HONOR WOMAN JUST LET OUT OF BRITISH JAIL

LAHORE, Punjab, India, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Resolutions against child marriage, polygamy, opium, alcohol, white slave traffic, child labor and another urging raising of the age of consent for girls to eighteen years were passed today by the Asian women's congress, representing the women of many oriental countries.

In the concluding session, Mrs. Sarojini Naidu, released this week from Yeroda prison, Poona, where she was confined for offenses growing out of the civil disobedience campaign, was elected president of the congress as "recognition of her services for India's advancement."

Delegates to the congress urged that in order to promote the spirit of religious tolerance, love and harmony among all communities, the lives and teachings of all the great religious leaders should be taught in public schools and a comparative study of the great religions of the world should be included in the curricula of the colleges.

Dentists Will Meet to Discuss Care of Teeth, Good Diets

Teeth and their troubles—and their care—are scheduled for plenty of attention next week. The sixty-seventh annual convention of the Chicago Dental society opens Monday at the Hotel Sherman, with an expected attendance of from 8,000 to 10,000 visitors from all parts of the world. For four days, up to and including Thursday, dentists, clinicians, physicians, and medical and dental students will attend meetings of the eight major sections and the especially staged clinics.

John J. Hollister, executive secretary of the organization, yesterday asserted that the program planned will make this the most comprehensive such meeting ever held here. The material to be presented, he emphasized, is drawn from leading medical and dental colleges and covers medical as well as dental aspects of the causes, effects, treatment and prevention of oral diseases.

One of the main themes of the convention will be the effect of selected diets on dental health, and the possibilities of preventing dental ills through diet. Other topics to be discussed are:

Gala Audience at Chaplin Movie as He Defies Talkies

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—Charlie Chaplin tonight staged the world opening of his new motion picture, "City Streets," with Dr. Albert Einstein, Gov. Rolph of California, mayors of a dozen coast cities, and several Mexican federal officials present. The women present, it was estimated, wore $3,000,000 worth of satins, silks, furs and jewels. Chaplin's film is the first he released in nearly three years. It dares the present trend in movie successes, by disregarding all dialogue and vocal sound, and utilizing only incidental sounds such as the ticking of clocks, clock chimes, barks and whistles.

VETERAN CONDUCTOR MAKES HIS LAST RUN ON THE BROADWAY

New York, Jan. 30.—[Special.]—Fifty-four years and eight months with the Pennsylvania railroad, Timothy J. Haley, conductor on the Broadway Limited, running to Chicago, was retired today with a modest little ceremony at Pennsylvania station. By special concession he was permitted then to take his train out for the last time.

For Haley passed the 70 year mark on Jan. 20, and all employes of the road, be they presidents or track walkers, are pensioned at that age.

Unaffectedly, standing up straight and stiff in his specially pressed uniform, he heard himself commended by L. K. Marr, assistant general superintendent of the New York zone, and by "Billy" Egan, station master. Mr. Marr read a little poetry to him and Mr. Egan wished him luck. Also they gave him a set of pipes and plenty of tobacco.

"What are you going to do?" they asked him.

Which was a joke, and not a bad joke for an old man with a full heart who dropped off the train at Harrisburg late tonight and went home with never a train to take out in the future.

Science Asks Why Women Outlive Men

Economics May Tell Secrets, Chicagoans Say.

Just why the average life span for women in Illinois exceeds that of the men by two and one-half years, as was made known Thursday by Dr. Andy Hall, state director of public health, was discussed yesterday by two physiologists.

They agreed that there was no physiological reason why men should not live as long as women. One of them, however, said there was a biological reason why women live longer. The other maintained that the difference in the life spans probably was caused by the larger number of violent deaths among men.

Dr. Andrew C. Ivy, head of the physiology department of Northwestern university, said there is a fundamental biological difference between the average length of life of the female and the male.

"For example, under the same environmental conditions, when starved to death, the female fly will live 10 per cent longer than the male. Why? One can guess, but no one knows. You see it in all animal and insect life. Physiologically, we cannot define the difference, or the cause, but the female is more important in nature than the male. More of them are needed for reproduction. Therefore, the female is so endowed that her endurance is greater. Women have more vitality than men."

As for women in industry and business, their work does not subject them to the psychic and physical damage wrought on men, Dr. Ivy said. "Most of such women are stenographers," he said. "They haven't the responsibility, the nervous strain and wear and tear, that men have. Their jobs don't mean as much to them. Also, it will be a long time before women in industry cease to have certain protections men don't have."

Both Dr. Ivy and Dr. Anton J. Carlson, instructor in physiology in the University of Chicago, listed as significant the effect of modern business on the nervous system of men. Dr. Carlson, however, thought that this advantage women have over men was offset by the greater emotional intensity of women. Not so Dr. Ivy.

"If anything, I have an idea that men are more emotional than women," Dr. Ivy said. "Of course, we cannot describe any fundamental differences between the nervous system of men and women that would make one more intense than the other. But there are environmental differences. Women have as much creative and other ability as men have, I believe, but environment has not brought it out. Men have had to be creative."

Physicians will agree that women take better care of themselves than men, Dr. Ivy said. Men make more of a fuss over it if they are sick, but they only talk about it, and do nothing to help themselves, he said.

With regard to mortality caused by three major diseases, Dr. Ivy said statistics showed that up to the age of 20, deaths per million among men were 1,396 compared to 1,903 among women. He attributed that partly to women's desire to diet, and the working girl's desire for clothes above food. From 20 to 55 years, 7,368 men die to 4,833 women.

In 12,000 cases of pneumonia, he said, 73.4 per cent were males and 26.5 per cent were females. The mortality in males was 19.7 per cent and in females 2.5 per cent. Men with heart disease break down earlier than do women. More than one-half of the women so afflicted, getting by the fourth decade, compared to less than one-half of the men.

Dr. Carlson said accidents in industry and deaths by violence could cause the 4½ year difference between the span of life in men and women in Illinois. He cited the large number of women who die through childbirth, by far more than the number of men killed in wars. He was of the opinion more men died in automobile accidents, however.

The speed of modern industry has produced an increase in chronic disease, and that, according to Samuel A. Goldsmith, new executive director of the Jewish Charities of Chicago, has created a problem for social service. Mr. Goldsmith, former head of the Jewish social service bureau in New York, addressed the forum at the Covenant club at a luncheon yesterday.

"The outstanding problem in social service today is what to do about this chronic sickness," Mr. Goldsmith said. "We must find some way to save men and women from the industrial scrap heap. We must think in terms of slowing up the machine."

Junior League Braving Flu for Art's Sake

BY THALIA ——.

THE Junior leaguers are having to pinch hit for all they're worth to keep "Pinocchio" on its feet, as it were. While everybody else was having "flu" and temperatures, Emily Pope went unique and got appendicitis, and so Mrs. Winterbotham is taking over her part of Candlewick besides her own two rôles for this morning's performance.

Katherine Drake, who was too sick to go on last week, is still abed, and Jane Schuttler will sub for her again. Eugenia Garard is doing Kay Byfield's Columbine, and Helen Pope, Barbara Bond's part. Flu or no flu, the cast is delighted with Gregory Ratoff's directing and thinks the play is wonderfully improved since he began working with them.

Prof. Arthur Upham Pope of the Art institute of Chicago, an organizer and expert of the Persian exhibition in London, and his wife, Dr. Phyllis Ackerman, are being entertained a lot, according to our London correspondent. So I suppose Ginny Carpenter, who is sort of publicity agent for the show, is, too. Ginny's plans for the immediate future are not set yet, because the exhibition may go on somewhere else. Her parents, the John Alden Carpenters, are sailing in late February for China, and Mrs. Carpenter plans to go on straight around and meet Ginny, while Mr. Carpenter will return in the direction from whence he came.

Fashionables faring here and there . . . Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus McCormick Jr. left Chicago yesterday to go to their ranch at Santa Fé . . . Miss Elizabeth Stuart is down in New York, visiting her brother Charles (he is in his lovely new apartment at Pierre's) and they are going down to Aiken, where their sister, Miss Harriet, will join them about the 10th for a short holiday . . . Mrs. Frederick C. Letts is mentioned among the prominent golfers aboard the Munargo, which sailed yesterday for a cruise to Nassau, Miami, and Havana, and the Mitchell Follansbees are on the same cruise . . . Miss Inez de Soriano departed yesterday for a week in New York before she and her mother sail on the Bremen, back to Spain, and meanwhile the Marquise d'Ivanrey has left the Ambassador and gone over to be with her brother and sister-in-law, the Chauncey Blairs, at their apartment at 73 East Elm street.

It's a gift! The dandy big group of Pacific walrus that Bruce Thorne and George Coe Graves II. of New York obtained on an expedition is now installed in the hall of marine mammals at the Field museum, complete with background, lighting effects, and scenery . . . also recently presented to the museum are "two magnificent and highly valuable gems, one of them pronounced by experts the largest and finest of its kind in the world," the gift of Richard T. Crane Jr. The one which has no equal of its kind is a topas of the variety known as rose topaz, royal topaz, and Brazil topaz, and the other is a black opal in the form of a plaque, stippled all over with minute brilliant colors which change as the stone is seen from different angles. Acquisitions at the Art institute include a very interesting and rare oriental rug given by Mrs. Emily Crane Chadbourne, and 27 rare examples of tin glaze faience, the present of Mr. and Mrs. Martin A. Ryerson.

In case you haven't already heard . . . the F. Dorsey Montgomerys Jr. of Lake Forest are to be congratulated on the birth of their third child, a son, on Thursday at Pres [Presbyterian hospital] . . . Dr. and Mrs. P. J. H. Farrell are visiting down in San Antonio [Dr. Farrell, colonel in the medical corps of the U. S. army, was stationed at Fort Sam Houston for a while during the world war before he sailed for France, and they have lots of civilian and army friends thereabouts] . . . the Frederick H. Bartletts and the E. A. Cudahys were recent registrants at the Huntington in Pasadena . . . Booked to sail on the Rotterdam for the Mediterranean cruise next Thursday are the Walter H. Atwaters of Evanston, their daughter, Miss Lydia Atwater, and Miss Edith Kohlsaat of Hubbard Woods . . . Mrs. Frank Loesch gave a luncheon at the Mayflower in Washington, D. C., on Thursday for Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wife of Mr. Justice Roberts.

Conveying Information in Several Directions, It Seems.

Note particularly for engaged girls, brides, and young mothers! It seems to be necessary to state that the society department of THE TRIBUNE is not in cahoots with any photographer or photographic studio, and does not authorize such to take pictures to appear in the pages of this newspaper. The society editor may phone you and ask you if you have a picture of yourself, but she never says "Will you please have a picture taken?"

Incidentally . . . the Radcliffe Club of Chicago is having a luncheon meeting today at the Woman's City club, with Miss Elizabeth Singleton, principal of the Girls' Latin school and a Radcliffe alumna, as guest of honor. . . . The Lester Armours took the Golden State Limited last night for Phoenix. . . . It will be summer before the Milan Hulberts and their four daughters get back from their Mediterranean cruise, as they are planning to leave the boat and take side trips, but they'll probably return before Milan Jr. is graduated from Dartmouth in June. . . . The James Ewing Bennetts, who have moved into their new residence at 344 Wellington avenue, have gone to Florida and Cuba. . . . Betty Johnston is finishing at Bryn Mawr now, having made up the semester she lost when she made her debut, and will soon be back in town.

Concerning today's and tomorrow's festivities . . . the Winter club and Kismoor carnivals have been postponed until next Saturday, depending on the weather, because there isn't any ice at all. . . . Mrs. Waller Borden is having a luncheon at the Arts club this noon, and then, there's the Edgar Storrs' luncheon for Foujita, also at the Arts club. . . . All the [illegible] the Gigli benefit concert for Ollvet institute are sold, and there will probably be an immense crowd at the Opera house for it. . . . Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick is having ten guests for the supper and musical by Segovia at the Arts club tomorrow night, and Mrs. John Alden Carpenter is having a small supper at home, afterwards taking her guests on to the club for the musical. . . .

The play will be presented in those suburbs under the auspices of the college alumnæ as a benefit for the college building and equipment funds. Mrs. Walter C. Roberts is in charge of the reservations for the Evanston performances, to be given in Harrison hall on Saturday, Feb. 14. The play will be presented at 10:30 o'clock, at 2:15, and for the Valentine luncheon to be served at noon.

The play, based on an old English story, is an original dramatization by Miss Clara Belle Baker and Miss Etta Mount of the college faculty.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—President Hoover gave a dinner tonight at the White House in honor of the prime minister of Canada, R. B. Bennett, who is in Washington for an unofficial visit. Mrs. Hoover and her house guests, Mrs. Stark McMullin and Miss Sue Dyer of California and Mrs. Herbert Hoover Jr., who arrived at the White House yesterday, had their dinner in the private dining room.

Invitations have been issued for Thursday evening, Feb. 5, by the Congressional club for the annual reception in honor of the Vice President. The cards read: "The Vice President and Mrs. Edward Everett Gann." The club's next evening party will be in honor of Speaker of the House and Mrs. Longworth.

Among those receiving this afternoon at the tea of the League of Republican Women of the District of Columbia were Mrs. Paul M. Linebarger of Chicago and Washington, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, formerly of Chicago; Mrs. V. L. Bielefeldt and Miss Cole.

Mr. and Mrs. John Marshall of Hubbard Woods, Ill., are at the Mayflower for the week-end. They were joined today by their daughter, Miss Janet Marshall, who came from Bryn Mawr.

"Blondie's" Married, but Finds She Cares for Another Man

BY DORIS BLAKE.

The humorous thing about the average married woman who finds herself building love castles around a gentleman to whom she is not married is that she thinks hers is an isolated case; that the great temptation has been sent to her only; that is, if she thinks of it as a temptation which she sometimes does and sometimes does not. Often, in fact, she lights her life from within with the rays of a glorious martyrdom, unless she goes ultra-modern and decamps body and soul with the outside Romeo.

The truth is that there is nothing isolated, nothing exclusive about her state of mind, or heart, as she would more likely choose to call it. Certainly, in these free days of ours, the "extra" man hanging around is not the unusual sight he might be for the greater peace of matrimony. So women ought to dissipate the idea that there is anything "exceptional" about the affair engrossing them at the moment. It is quite common. And common is exactly the word that should be used.

All the above by way of introducing one who appends the ignoble signature, "Blondie." That signature always robs a problem of its serious aspect to me, at least.

Well, "Blondie" has a husband in a million, yet her life is miserable. She says she is fickle and blonde, satisfied with something for a while only. Then she gets tired of it. But this great love—well, he is something different. He just came back into her life after some years' absence. She used to go to school with him.

"But for all the world," she relates, "I could not hurt my husband. He will never know. Divorce is disgusting to me, so that is out. So I suppose I must go on living this life, pretending to him that he is the great love of my life," etc., etc.

Don't you think, too, that Blondie, like a lot of other women, just likes to talk about it? That is all there is to this romancing? It seems that way. And there wouldn't be much harm in it if women weren't extremists when they get to thinking about something. The trouble is that they can think and talk themselves into almost anything if their husbands, homes and youngsters don't keep them sufficiently occupied to keep out of mischief.

JUNIOR GIRL'S DRESS.

Here is a darling party dress for girls, not at all difficult to make, and wonderfully pretty when finished. The double circular peplum ruffles that top the circular flaring skirt are a chic detail, and the neckline is especially smart with the shoulder capelet that takes the place of sleeves. Taffeta, crêpe de chine, net, bat crêpe and flowered organdy are lovely materials from which to choose.

The pattern, 2899, comes in sizes 8, 10, 12, and 14 years. Size 8 requires 2½ yards of 39 inch material.

Mason Attends Performance of "Chanticleer"

BY EDWARD MOORE.

DANIEL GREGORY MASON, chief of the music department of Columbia university, came to Orchestra hall yesterday afternoon to hear the first Chicago performance of his festival overture, "Chanticleer," and there can be little doubt that he enjoyed both the performance of the piece and its reception.

In spite of obvious temptations, Mr. Mason would seem to have successfully avoided becoming philosophical or academic in his composition. Here are the cheerful external sounds of the poultry yard, following Thoreau's motto: "I do not propose to write an ode to dejection, but to brag as lustily as chanticleer in the morning, standing in his roost, if only to wake my neighbors up," and concerned with little else.

This is not music that searches the soul. It has a perhaps better function, to be gay and light of spirit, leaving serious musings to the heavier minded. On that basis, Mr. Mason has written a work entirely to the purpose.

The program was without a soloist. In the absence of such an entertainer, Dr. Stock did a bit of reviving, and one of his revivals turned out to be a timely one. It was "The Garden of Fand" by Arnold Bax, introduced about ten years ago and never played since.

Haydn's Symphony in C minor was also played. Not bearing a special label on the program, it does not seem to have been played in any past season, and therefore may count as a first performance. It is Haydn at his most workmanlike, though perhaps not at his most melodious.

Both the Schumanns were likewise represented, the romantic Robert with the overture to "Genoveva," and the almost modern Georg with the Dance of Nymphs and Satyrs from "Amor and Psyche." Both these register as good filler, but there was a climax to the program in Dr. Stock's own concert arrangement of selections from the third act of "Siegfried." These settings still remain the best way to hear Wagner.

The magnificent voice of Paul Robeson, actor and singer of spirituals, filled Orchestra hall last night. Here is one of the great voices of the world, regardless of race. Whether he sang, whether he merely spoke to announce a song, that voice rolled out with an effortless vitality that filled the hall and carried every syllable to the remotest corner.

Merely to hear its tone was an unfailing delight. To hear it applied to a song was a greater one. Nearly all the program was Negro music, spiritual or secular. Occasionally he stepped out into an imitation, "Ol' Man River," for instance. But "Ol' Man River" is a thing to test the range of the best baritone of them all, and to hear Mr. Robeson do it, gorgeous tone throughout, perfectly covered throughout, every syllable of every word as plain as though it were being read instead of sung, was to get a new idea of the song. As for the real Negro music, from "Water Boy" to "Li'l David," it was the experience of a lifetime, or at least of the interval until Paul Robeson decides to sing them again.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

This business of getting ready to appear bright and shining before your public should begin by the light of the evening before.

That face cleansing operation upon which depends in large measure your getting the "once over" on tomorrow's highway should be done at night. It's the logical time for it. There are other things to do in the morning. So get that out of the way the night before. Beside you've got to get rid of all the things that may be cluttering up the facial scene, and you can only shoo off the dust, the grime, and the makeup remains with a good cleaning.

Incidentally, don't wash just as you come in from outdoors, these cold days. Let a little time elapse—enough to permit the blood to be warmed up, if you are in a hurry use a cleansing cream only, for the time being.

But for the nightly face work to be prepared for the morrow's scrutiny approach the job unhurriedly. Use your good cleanser first. Clean that first layer off with tissue. Then have ready your nice basin of warm water and a good soap, and wash. Rinse in clear, warm water. The washing not only gets rid of the grease left after the cream cleansing, but it stimulates the skin.

Dry the face now, and while it is warm smear on some of your massage cream (or fresh cleansing cream, if that is all you have) and massage the face very gently, with up and out strokes, or working in a rotary fashion on the up and out.

Then in the morning the treatment is simple, quick, and good. You won't need ice in the basin of cold water, possibly, these mornings, but you do want the water very, very cold for the face plunge. Dry. If you face needs astringent badly use a bit of cotton here, moistened with a mild astringent.

After this put on your foundation cream as a makeup base, then your war paint and be off to dress knowing that you've done the best you could and that if you keep that treatment up for six months you will have a pretty fine grain and texture of skin to project fearlessly in the strongest light.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

G. M.: PYORRHEA IS NOT A germ disease but is caused by uncleanliness, improper diet, and lack of stimulation. Not only must you brush the teeth but the soft tissues should be massaged. It is in the gum tissue between the teeth, due to lack of stimulation, that a great deal of pyorrhea has its inception. My booklet on mouth hygiene may be had for a stamped addressed envelope.

Parisian Styles Are Flowery for This Spring

PARIS, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Flowers, frills and folding drapes, recalling the coquetry of bygone days, marked afternoon gowns displayed in thronged dressmaking establishments today as feminine fripperies for tea parties this spring.

Artificial flowers designed in bracelets, necklaces, and rings or tucked into belts or chiffon were the romantic contributions to women's spring teatime gowns displayed before crowds of American buyers. Even the names of the new gowns suggested romance.

There were black and white chiffons patterned like old Bamberg lace, designed with bertha collars and skirts six inches from the floor with clusters of crimson silk roses tucked into the belts.

A chocolate brown crêpe frock with vest and cuffs or orange and yellow Irish embroidery was worn with a bracelet of yellow artificial asters and a silk ring set with a single flower of the same kind.

Chiffon afternoon frocks continued to be displayed with flowing drapes while crepe models featured peplums or plaited skirts as earlier showings. Sleeves in formal teatime gowns were often tight above the elbows, extending into long drapes, sometimes falling as low as the hemline, while sleeves in the utilitarian models varied from elbow length to long semi-tight design.

Skirt lengths for daytime frocks varied from seven inches from the floor in dressy models, to eleven in street dresses. Lingerie, collars and cuffs were of organdy pique and linen with Irish embroidery in white and pastel shades.

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

The revised edition of the sex education booklet is now ready and will be sent on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

We are likely to sit down and think, "I want my children to be thus and so."

I suppose if we mothers—and fathers and relatives and teachers and nurses—were to sum up what we would want our children to be like, it would read something like this:

"I want my child to be obedient, but not subservient. I want him to be daring, but not foolhardy—cautious, but not fearful—generous, but not extravagant—to value money, but not stingy. I want him to be honest, loyal, truthful, tolerant of people, intelligent about his health but not fearful of it, polite, considerate, loving, industrious, happy, contented"—and so forth and so forth.

And if our child doesn't live up to our expectations we are likely to be disappointed—and apt, too, to blame him for the defection.

Yet—have you ever stopped to think—stopped to ask yourself:

"Do I offer him in my personal life a pattern for all these things? Do the others in the family furnish him an example of these qualities good enough for him to emulate? Does the atmosphere in which he has to live make it reasonable of me to expect these high things of him?"

And did you ever go further and answer these questions?

If we answered ourselves honestly most of us would, I believe, find that we are expecting infinitely more of our children than we are able to perform ourselves and that we are trying to hold them up to standards that they can often plainly see us fall below, almost as if we said to them: "Do as I say and not as I do."

A FRIEND IN NEED

Needs Engineer's Outfit.

"After many months of unemployment I have finally secured a job out of the city. I am an engineer, and this is to be a road laying job, and I haven't the proper clothing or equipment. Do you think another engineer who has discarded his outfit would give me some of the things? I shall need a mackinaw, size 40; heavy flannel or khaki shirts, size 15½; 'packs,' or high shoes, size 11 or 11½, and heavy woolen breeches, the kind that lace up the sides. If you can get me any of these it will be a help to me when I start on this job. I shall have to leave within the next few days.

"R. P."

We are most anxious to have this man get the articles he needs to begin his new work. It probably means the beginning of his rehabilitation and the end of his employment problem.

Food Talk.

From the rockbound coast of Maine to the sunny slopes of the Pacific there, perhaps, are at least a dozen different ways to bake beans. It seems there is a bean sectionalism in this country. Easterners have one way, westerners another, and midwesterners still another.

The reason that some of us do not enjoy baked beans from another locality is due to the fact that we have never learned to appreciate the combination of flavors used. The famed Boston baked beans are sweetened with molasses, which also imparts a darker brown color. Brown and even white sugar are used in some parts of the country.

Some people prefer their beans highly seasoned. To obtain this they use mustard, onions, tomato sauce, etc. Still another group prefers only a seasoning of salt, pepper and fat salt pork. Bostonians look with scorn on beans baked without molasses and only with salt pork while few people in the middle west care for sweetened baked beans. But no matter what is used in the preparation of the beans the old fashioned cooks had a standard method of preparation that has never been improved upon. Brick ovens were used for the baking process. The bean pot or jug full of beans was placed in the oven and allowed to bake slowly all day or night until the beans were tender and plump.

Baked beans are highly nutritious. Beans are rich in protein, phosphorus and iron. The last named element is most important.

Traditionally, brown bread is served with beans, but other varieties are equally good. A salad and simple dessert with a beverage are all we need to have an adequate luncheon or dinner menu.

PINEAPPLE LOAF CAKE.

2 egg yolks.
1 cup grated pineapple.
Grating of nutmeg.
2 cups flour.
1 teaspoon baking powder.

Cream butter until plastic. Add sugar in 3 portions, working each one in well. Add egg yolk and beat thoroughly. Add pineapple and combine. Add sifted dry ingredients in 3 portions, stirring until flour is just dampened and then beat to combine. Fold in stiffly beaten egg white and give a few vigorous stirs. Turn into a loaf tin. Bake in a moderate oven [350 degrees Fahrenheit] for 40 minutes.

1 sliced onion.
1 quart clams.
4 cups potatoes cut in ¾-inch cubes.
2 cups boiling water.
1 cup stewed and strained tomatoes.
1 cup scalded milk.
1 cup scalded cream.
Salt.
Pepper.

Cook pork with onion and cold water 10 minutes; drain and reserve liquor. Wash clams and reserve liquor. Parboil potatoes 5 minutes and drain. To potatoes add reserved liquors, hard part of clams, finely chopped, and boiling water. When potatoes are nearly done, add tomatoes, soda, soft part of clams, milk, cream and butter. Season with salt and pepper. Split crackers, soak in cold milk to moisten and reheat in chowder.

1 tablespoon salt.
1 tablespoon to 1 cup molasses, depending on flavor.
3 tablespoons sugar.
Boiling water.

Pick over beans, cover with cold water and soak overnight. Drain, cover with fresh water, heat slowly [keeping water below boiling point], and cook until skins will burst—which is best determined by taking a few beans on the tip of a spoon and blowing on them, when skins will burst if sufficiently cooked.

Drain beans. Scald pork and scrape, remove ⅛ inch slice and put in bottom of bean pot. Cut through rind of remaining pork every half inch, making cuts one inch deep. Put beans in pot and bury pork in beans, leaving rind exposed. Mix salt, molasses and sugar, add 1 cup boiling water and pour over beans; then add enough more boiling water to cover beans.

Cover bean pot and bake 6 to 8 hours in slow oven [250 degrees Fahrenheit], uncovering the last hour of cooking, that rind may become brown and crisp. Add water as needed. If pork mixed with lean is preferred to a less salt.

Parisiennes Dine in Huge Flowered Chiffon

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—The California boosters never dreamed of bigger flowers than bloom on the new chiffons that Paris is making into evening gowns for spring. Laid end to end it wouldn't take many of these Carnera posies to make a mile, and they are mighty effective scattered on a black ground.

Patou is making restaurant dinner frocks of this flowered chiffon, and putting them under shortish velvet coats so they equal an ensemble.

One of the prettiest of these is shown in the sketch. Patou calls it "Ou Dinerons Nous," which translated freely means "Where'll we eat." The dress is simple with a plain blouse and scarf collar. The belt is a crushed length of flowered chiffon. The skirt is only medium long, but double trailing panels at the sides slither along the floor when one walks. Very graceful and grandladyish.

The coat is dark red velvet to match the red of the flower pattern on the chiffon. It is a wrap around and has a shawl collar that turns into a big bow on the left shoulder—a bow with an over-size red silk rose stuck into it. Fur trimmed evening wraps are being abandoned as spring nears, but this one goes right on as the favorite velvet does in real material. The sleeves of this jacket are fitted to the arms so tightly they look as if they were poured on, and this is one reason it is so chic.

WOMEN DEMAND U. S. DEFENSES BE ADEQUATE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—As some 900 women, bedecked with the badges of at least 40 different patriotic organizations, met here today to consider our national defense, they tucked powder puffs into their handbags and decided by acclamation that there are times when gun powder is more effective than face powder.

If the women of America, runs the theme of this conference, can afford to spend money on cold creams and cosmetics, then they can certainly afford to spend money on guns and generals. And every time a woman speaker makes this declaration from the platform she is enthusiastically applauded from the floor.

Up in the gallery a small group—a man in clericals, two men that might be professors—little knots of quiet women, sit and listen and do not applaud. Sometimes they take notes.

"The gallery's full of pacifists," whispers the ladies on the ground floor and twist their necks to glare up at the balcony.

Hear Plea by Moffett.

In addition to the women speakers this afternoon, an admiral in uniform with medals on his breast, and a retired major general with a ribband of valor on his business suit, told the delegates a few things about ships and wars and unpreparedness.

A blue print navy won't do the United States a bit of good if war is declared, warned Rear Admiral W. A. Moffett, as he urged the women to urge their senators to speed the work of building the ships we are allowed by the terms of the London naval treaty.

"You come to Washington at an opportune time," said Rear Admiral Moffett. "We are all looking towards one particular goal, the passage of the navy building program at this session of congress. Such groups of Americans as you must let it be known plainly that the people of this country insist on having such a navy, or congress may turn its attention to other issues.

"Before leaving Washington, I suggest you see your senators and representatives. Talk to your fellow citizens at home. Those of you who suffered because in 1914 the United States made her young men go to war unprepared and because this country had not recognized its duty to maintain its place as a real sea power, have a right to demand that we never be found unprepared again."

Plea for the R. O. T. C.

And among the ways of preparedness is military training in all schools and colleges, advised Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, retired, now head of the R. O. T. C. association.

The major general, in referring to the opposition of many clergy to R. O. T. C. schools, went back to the Bible for ammunition, cited the story of Christ driving the money lenders from the temple with some display of force, and argued that "Christ himself would be for military training were He on earth today."

Equally serious, Mr. Fries believes, is the congressional opposition to compulsory military training. "For those opponents won't stop at the compulsory part of it," he predicted, "they will work along to have all military training abolished."

AIMEE AND DAUGHTER ON WAY TO SHANGHAI UNDER ASSUMED NAMES

HONOLULU, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Traveling as Mrs. F. W. Poate and Miss Isabel Poate, Aimee Semple McPherson and her daughter, Roberta, spent today touring and shopping in Honolulu and departed tonight for Shanghai without admitting their identity.

Despite the statements of passengers on the steamship President Wilson, on which she arrived here, Mrs. McPherson denied her identity. Passengers said she had announced prior to her arrival she would change to her correct name after leaving Honolulu.

According to passengers, Mrs. McPherson is going to Shanghai to see the birthplace in China of her daughter, who was born when her father and mother were missionaries there. En route to Honolulu Roberta danced with young men passengers, among them Edward A. Hansen, round the world tourist from New Rochelle, N. Y.

Peoria, Ill., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—Admitting that she loved her "Little David," Miss Helen Harseim, pretty 34 year old Secor girl, identified 35 letters sent to her by the veteran David Belsley, wealthy retired banker and farmer of Peoria, who is now defendant in a $100,000 suit being tried here.

The girl occupied the witness stand throughout today and will be subjected to a cross-examination when court reconvenes Monday. The case is not likely to go to the jury of four women and eight men before Wednesday.

The girl testified that in March, 1928, while the two were riding about the country in his big sedan, Belsley proposed to her.

"I have always cared for you, won't you marry me soon?" she repeated his words. She said she consented. In April, she said, they went to a Peoria jewelry store here and Belsley had a big diamond set in a mounting for her engagement ring. The stone was the one he had worn in a shirt stud, she said. Afterward the inscription "D. C. to Helen 4-5-28" was placed inside the ring.

Asked About Finances.

Helen's counsel then pursued an inquiry into what she knew about Belsley's financial standing. The defense is insisting that he never was a wealthy man.

On cross-examination she said he told her he was worth $200,000.

On Christmas, 1928, he was violently ill and could not keep an engagement to come to her home after eating dinner with his mother and brothers and sisters, she said. She went to Peoria on the following Sunday and took him some roses and comic papers. He was in bed but put his arm around her and kissed her, she said.

Jury Deadlocks in Debt Case Against Cannon's Son

Pasadena, Cal., Jan. 30.—(AP)—For a second time a jury trying Richard M. Cannon for alleged failure to pay wages at an El Monte military school with which he was associated, disagreed today. Ten such claims against Cannon, son of Bishop James Cannon Jr. of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, were placed before the justice of peace court here.

FRENCH CONFIRM SON OF BUTCHER AS THEIR PREMIER

Youthful Laval Wins Two Tests in Chamber.

PARIS, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Pierre Laval, a butcher's son and one of the youngest of France's ministers, was confirmed as the head of the government by the chamber of deputies in two test votes tonight.

The youthful prime minister staked the life of his ministry on a laconic resolution expressing approval of the ministerial declaration which he had read earlier in the day, and in which he asked for peace among the political groups so that he might carry on the country's business without the interruptions of political bickering.

He was accorded a vote of 312 to 258 and immediately raised the question of confidence anew by demanding the rejection of an amendment which had been offered to the original motion.

Wins Another Vote.

The result was another vote in his favor of 309 to 258. It was a foregone conclusion in view of the earlier balloting, but in the opinion of political observers added new strength to the premier's position.

Although the declaration covered the government's general policy, the debate tonight turned largely on the question of the extension of free education in the public schools so as to include the grades corresponding to those in American high schools.

Wants Politics Divorced.

The premier expressed readiness to extend the free education, but insisted that the question be treated as an educational and not a political issue.

Although this position accorded to a large extent with that taken by the radicals, the latter declared that the government had not given sufficient guarantees that free secondary education would be achieved.

The amendment to the original motion provided that the chamber's competence should be interpreted as including a determination to defend the secularized schools, and this Laval rejected as introducing too political an element.

12 MENNONITE ELDERS SUED FOR WIFE'S LOVE

Chambersburg, Pa., Jan. 30.—(AP)—A former member of the new or reformed Mennonite church today entered suit in Franklin County court for $200,000 damages against a dozen officials and members of the church charging alienation of his wife's affections.

Adin S. Shank, formerly of Zullinger, but now of Salt Lake City, Utah, filed the suit, which is based upon the refusal of his wife to live with him after his excommunication or expulsion from the church.

According to Benjamin L. Heesner of Chambersburg, one of counsel for the complainant, the Mennonite elders demanded that Shank give up ownership of stocks and bonds inherited from his father, and when he refused he was ejected from the church.

Wife Obeyed Elders.

The wife, Mrs. Blanche Shank, was alleged to have accepted the orders of the church officials and refused to live with her husband after the expulsion.

Failing to win his wife back, counsel for Shank said, Shank moved to Salt Lake City, where he obtained a divorce on the grounds of desertion Sept. 1, 1929.

The twelve persons named defendants are members of the branch of the Mennonite church, generally regarded as having clung closer to the customs and traditions of their forefathers than the other seven sects. There are about 2,000 members in south central Pennsylvania and most of them reside in Lancaster county.

It is against the tenets of their faith to enter a court action and those named defendants will go to the Franklin County court to defend themselves only if subpoenaed.

Bishop Gives Version.

Bishop Jacob Kreider of Lancaster, one of the defendants, denied today, when informed of the filing of the suit, that the church officials had interfered in any way in the family relationships of the Shanks.

Asked why Shank was expelled from the church, Bishop Kreider said: "Well, I understand the congregation took action because of the way he was treating his wife."

STADIUM ACTS TO BAR TITLE BOUT IN CHICAGO

URGES UNIFIED ATHLETIC CODE FOR COLLEGES

Michigan Gets Prof. Aigler's Report.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 30.—(AP)—A sharp line of demarcation which would make "outlaws" of colleges and universities not subscribing to certain general principles of "athletic propriety' is advocated by Prof. Ralph W. Aigler in his report as chairman of the board in control of athletics at the University of Michigan.

The principles set forth in the report, made public tonight, are, in effect, the cardinal rules of the Western conference.

The veteran faculty athletic official, who last year directed a blast at the famous Carnegie bulletin 23, proposed the rules to which he believes colleges should be required to subscribe.

Aigler's Five Proposals.

They are:

1. Requirement of a full year's residence and earned credit, with no excuse deficiencies, for eligibility.
2. No eligibility after three years of intercollegiate competition.
3. Competition limited to undergraduates.
4. No intercollegiate football after the Saturday before Thanksgiving and no more than five college days absence from the home campus during the season.
5. Effective faculty control of athletic activities.

Limitation of membership in the National Collegiate Athletic association to colleges and universities accepting these rules was advocated on the ground that "this method of separating the sheep from the goats, the desirables from the undesirables, has been found productive of much good in other fields. The placard of 'outlaw' is one no institution likes or can afford to wear."

Ninety per cent of the present membership of the association, Prof. Aigler estimates, would be eligible under the proposed rules.

Ten Per Cent Get Blame.

"It is further believed," his report adds, "that the remaining 10 per cent occasion fully 90 per cent of the ground for criticism of overemphasis and other evils laid at the door of intercollegiate sport."

In another section of his report, the Michigan chairman takes digs at the criticisms of intercollegiate sports, especially football, asking the critics for something more than "sweeping generalizations." Football, he says, would indeed be overemphasized if its importance within the university with reference to other activities were "indicated by the space given to the sport in newspapers as compared to academic interests."

Big Receipts Incidental.

Big crowds, big gate receipts and big spectacles are merely incidental to football, the report asserts, and points out that few changes have been made in the playing of the game since the days when "spectators stood about the field or sat in carriages." A large majority of the present schedules would be unchanged if gate receipts were out of the picture, continued Prof. Aigler. He admitted, however, that there would be some changes, and said, incidentally, that one would be the elimination of night games. Michigan's schedule would be different if gate receipts were the main consideration, he added.

On the financial side the report showed that during the 1930 season Michigan's gross football receipts—total home game tickets, plus the university's share of out of town contests—was $684,910.53. This exceeded the 1928 total but fell below the record breaking $836,246.79 of 1929.

Prof. Aigler's report revealed that the coaching salary at Michigan is in excess of $6,500 a year. The total coaching charge against football for the 1929 season was placed at $18,575. This included eight full time members of the staff and three student members who have passed their period of eligibility. Some of the staff, however, are coaches in other sports.

Both teams played a slow, defensive game during the first half. De Paul was ahead, 12 to 7, at intermission. Neither team was able to score a point in the first five minutes of the second half. De Paul then changed its style, employing a fast breaking offensive with long passes and short shots. The change enabled the Blue Demons to run up three field goals in quick succession.

Powers and J. O'Connor starred for De Paul with a total of 14 points between them. Lau tallied six points and Atchison scored four for Detroit. Lineup:

MEETS LOYOLA TONIGHT.

The Loyola university basketball team will meet the University of Detroit at Loyola gymnasium tonight. There has long been a natural rivalry between these teams.

Coach Lennie Sachs of Loyola has been putting his squad through a stiff practice in preparation for tonight's game, which will be the last except one to be played on the home floor this season. Announcement has just been made that the Loyolans will meet Centenary college of Shreveport, La., at Loyola on Tuesday night.

This is an extra game which did not appear on the original schedule for the season. On Feb. 12 the Loyola team will play Western State Normal at Kalamazoo and on Feb. 14 their opponents will be Michigan State college at Lansing. The Loyola season will close at Detroit on Feb. 16.

GARDINER, LINN REACH FINALS IN RACQUET MEET

The teams of Clarence Pell and Stanley Mortimer, New York, and Robert Gardiner and Howard Linn, Chicago, advanced to the finals in the national championship racquet doubles at the Chicago Racquet club yesterday.

The New York team, big favorites to win the title, easily captured its semi-final match, crushing W. F. Krahl and A. F. Tuttle, Chicago, 15-2, 15-8, 15-0. Linn and Gardiner, former star golfer, had to fight four hard games to win over A. L. Corey and Palmer Dixon, New York, 12-15, 18-17, 15-5, 15-9.

Finals will be played this afternoon.

Battling Bozo Beats Bud Doran; Devine Wins

Battling Bozo, Birmingham heavyweight, added Bud Doran to his string of victims last night by winning a ten round decision at the Cicero stadium before a crowd of 1,500 people. In the semi-windup Harry Devine scored a six round decision over Jackie Davis. Each was credited with a knockdown.

Even Army Is Sensitive About Its Proselyting

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 30.—If the correspondence in the case of Kenneth Goff doesn't show that the Army tried to proselyte the young man for the West Point football team, then some one has changed the meaning of the word since the Carnegie Foundation defined it in that memorable paper on the wiles of the game.

A member of the Army Athletic association, which corresponds to the alumni, although it includes some honorary members who never attended the military academy, tried to get an appointment for Goff, and a yearling cadet connected with the football organization at the academy, who had known Goff in civilian life, worked from the inside to get his friend in, using such influence as he had, which seems to have been negligible.

Did Try Proselyting.

However laudable their motives may have been, these two persons were trying to proselyte a football player and the Army, instead of basing its defense on a plea that the effort was entirely unofficial, would do well just now to justify the practice. It looks as though the colleges, including the military academy, which is the most independent and the sanest of all in the matter of football policy, are afraid of a word. Proselyting achieved a sinister meaning in the time of the Mormon troubles and a word retains an unpleasant significance in its application to football quite out of proportion to the act.

In fact, proselyting in football is an offense only because the civilian schools overdid the thing. They began by proselyting, but they ended up by shanghaiing desirable athletes.

A Back Field Disappears.

Only a few years ago in the vicinity of Pittsburgh, which was then a sort of hell's half acre as to football ethics, one coach took his football team off into the country to a fall training camp and woke one morning to discover that his back field had disappeared from their tents during the night. The sentries were unable to explain the strange occurrence but the mystery was solved a little while later, when the athletes bobbed up at another school in the same district.

It was then recalled that the coach of the other school had visited the coach in command of the camp as an official courtesy on the night in question and, as a gesture of sportsmanship and confidence, was not required to submit to examination as he drove his flivver out of the reservation, at a late hour. The circumstantial evidence strongly indicated that the vanished athletes had been gagged with rolls of one dollar bills and hidden under the rug of the tonneau.

Dear Old Aunt Agnes!

The raid was not an entire success, however, as the visiting coach telephoned the camp later on and asked permission to speak to a promising triple threat freshman. The other coach, recognizing the voice, disguised himself as a second string center by affecting a dumb accent and inquired, "who wants to speak to him?"

"Tell him," said the treacherous enemy, affecting a falsetto tone, "that it is his dear old aunt Agnes."

At this the defending coach switched to an impersonation of the threatened athlete by the use of plenty of desedose and dems and exclaimed: "Oh, hello, auntie, this is me." In this way, he lured his opponent into a complete statement of his best terms for triple threat freshmen and convinced himself that he had been foully treated but he never got his back field back again.

Army Alumni Not Gulleless.

I realize that this was an extreme case and do not believe West Point has any such practices to answer for, but I am not one of those who regard the Army alumni as altogether innocent of guile. Considering Red Cagle's distaste for military life, it would be natural to suppose that some one prompted him to go to West Point.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

EARLIER CHICAGO.

DEAR WAKE: In the period from 1870 to 1885, and even later, 22d street (called Ringgold place previous to 1869), from State to Indiana, was a district of small stores which served an important residential neighborhood.

At the northeast corner of State was Broadway market, which had several stalls for stores similar to an arcade. Fred Dommer & Co. had a store on the State street side (1880) and D. F. Fiddelke a grocery just north (1886-'92). John Castigno (Italian John) used the northwest corner of State and 22d in 1875. Pat O'Brien had a saloon at 21st and State opposite the old horse car barns (1878).

J. C. Howland.

Recently a Helper spoke of a public school building located at Taylor and Diana place in the '50s. I am sure he meant Edina place, which later became Plymouth court. It was so named from the Plymouth church, which once stood at the northwest corner of Edina place and Van Buren street. Until 20 years old, I lived at 87 Jackson street. I am an "old timer," born on Wabash just south of Adams, and have lived here ever since. Mrs. Lucy R. Walker.

In view of the present wheat situation, the appended, from a review of Chicago commerce in 1856, furnished by Helper A. F. B., may be of interest:

"No better evidence need be required of the growth and prosperity of the country tributary to Chicago than the rapidly increasing quantity of wheat which pours into this market. In 1852 total receipts were less than 1,000,000 bushels. In 1856 they are nearly 9,000,000 bushels.

"When it is remembered that this is the contribution, not of an old and thoroughly filled province, but of a comparatively new and thinly settled country, it certainly may be quite excusable to anticipate the most bountiful returns for the future. The receipts of last year average over 28,000 bushels for each week day and the shipments 26,000 bushels each week day, or an aggregate movement of 54,000 bushels per day.

"At an average price of $1.25 per bushel, this movement involves the use of $67,500 per day, for the year the aggregate of $21,127,500. The Galena railroad with its branches still leads all other routes in the quantity of wheat brought to this market."

MAROON QUINTET INVADES GOPHER FLOOR TONIGHT

3 Other Chicago Teams to See Action.

While the University of Chicago basketball team is playing Minnesota at Minneapolis tonight with a tie for second place in the Big Ten standings awaiting the victor, three other Maroon teams will go into action.

The track team has its first conference dual meet at Bartlett gymnasium at 2 p. m., with Purdue furnishing the competition. At 8 p. m. in the Bartlett natatorium the Midway swimming team meets Ohio State. The Chicago wrestling team grapples the Minnesota squad at Minneapolis this afternoon.

Norgren Changes Lineup

In an effort to build a real five man offense, Coach Nels Norgren has made a radical change in his lineup for the return tilt with the Gophers. The Maroons clicked on enough free throws to nose out the Norsemen, 32 to 31, two weeks ago at the Midway, but will have to show decided improvement to cope with Minnesota's sharp shooting giants on the latter's floor.

Capt. Fish will start at center w[illegible] Jim Porter, a capable sophomore, taking over the Maroon leader's defensive post. Keith Parsons, who has been valuable only on the tip off, will be relegated to the bench in an attempt to put more speed and drive in the offense and add another potential scorer to the Midway lineup. Parsons did not play high school basketball and although a plugger has not developed sufficiently yet for Big Ten competition. Fish lacks height, but Norgren believes his speed and ball handling will be more valuable at center than at guard, while Porter can be relied upon to help Ashley on the defense.

Sid Yates, whose absence demoralized the Maroons in the Michigan game, has returned, having whipped the flu, and should be flipping them in from all angles with his usual brilliance. Paul Stephenson will start at the other forward post.

Meet Purdue Trackmen.

Although Orval Martin, sensational Purdue middle distance runner, has completed his competition, Coach Earl Martineau expects to have a well rounded team to meet Ned Merriam's squad his afternoon. Odom in the dash, Yunevich in the shot put, and Capt. Doyle, Chasey and Finn in the 440, 880, and mile run are the best Boilermaker performers.

Capt. Bud East in the dash and Dale Letts in the half and mile runs are Coach Merriam's stellar performers at the Midway, with a host of sophomores scattered through the list of events whom he expects to pick up enough points to nose out the Boilermakers. It will be the first Big Ten engagem nt for both schools.

The weak Maroon swimming team, swamped recently by Minnesota, should be more in its class with Ohio State, although the latter now may possess more actual strength than has been indicated.

HARRIS WINS 2D BLOCK, BUT LAGS IN CUE MATCH

Dr. Andrew J. Harris of Chicago won the second block in the national amateur championship challenge three cushion billiard match against Robert B. Harper of Denver at the Chicago Athletic association yesterday afternoon, but he trails by 100 to 84. Dr. Harris, the challenger, won by 50 to 43 in 86 innings, but Harper, who took the opening block, 50 to 34, went on and scored two more to bring the count to 50 to 50 in 99 innings. Today's block will start at 1:30 o'clock. The high runs were Harper 5, Harris 4.

West Parks Postpone Ice Carnival Till Feb. 14

The annual west parks' winter sports ice carnival, scheduled at the Garfield park lagoon this afternoon, was postponed because of soft ice. According to William J. Schultz, superintendent of small parks and playgrounds, the meet probably will be held Feb. 14.

Berg, Tireless as Ever, Punches Out Win Over Perlick

Despite the unanimity among the judges, some of the onlookers voiced their disapproval. This demonstration was interpreted as an expression of sentiment in favor of Perlick for a gallant battle against insurmountable odds.

Perlick won only the second round. The Michigan lad, willing and eager to fight in the opening round, found Berg's windmill-like style baffling, but came back in the second to frustrate Berg with a surprising assault in which he rocked the English lad with rights to the head and jaw.

But, with the third session, Perlick went on the retreat, flashing his right desperately as a protective weapon, and for the rest of the battle the Michigan lad was in flight when he was not holding or fighting weakly in an unsuccessful attempt to discourage the burning pace and furious punching of Berg.

Hall, Pupil, Beats Layton, Teacher, 50-29

Johnny Layton, former world's champion at three cushion billiards, took another lacing from his former pupil, Allen Hall of Chicago, as the championship tournament came to a close last night. He was beaten 50 to 29 and as a result Hall won second money and Layton dropped into third place in the final standings.

Hall was in great form and opened with a run of seven in the first inning. He got eight in the eighth inning and had other runs of five and four to score his triumph in 32 innings.

It was the second best performance of the tournament, Layton having won a 31 inning game earlier in the meet.

Layton established what some claim was a world's record when he got 18 billiards in 20 innings with no run of more than two to his credit. This happened in the first 20 innings when the former champion missed one close shot after another.

The victory brought about $6,000 to Hall, including a $3,000 yearly salary from a billiard concern. Score by innings:

CLEVELAND GETS WOOD, RECRUIT HAWK GOALIE

Alex Wood, rookie goal tender of the Chicago Blackhawks, yesterday was loaned to the Cleveland team of the International league. Baxter, the Cleveland goalee, was severely injured this week, and Wood will take his place until he returns to the game.

When the Blackhawks face the champion Les Canadiens tomorrow night at the Stadium, Doc Romnes, left wing, who was recalled from London because of Earl Miller's illness, will be in the Hawks' opening line. He will be teamed with Vic Desjardins and Frank Ingram.

N. B. A. SUSPENDS CARNERA; BACKS ITALIAN EDICT

Primo Carnera, recently returned to the United States, yesterday achieved distinction of being barred in practically every place in the world where boxing is recognized. Carnera now is under the ban of the National Boxing association, according to a bulletin of President John V. Clinnin. This suspension is in support of action taken by the International Boxing association and the Puglistica Italian for nonpension of contract. The I. B. A. has fined Carnera 6,700 francs, while the Italian board has fined him 20,220 lira.

LEVINSKY PUTS DILLON AWAY IN SECOND ROUND

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 30.—Harry Dillon managed to survive a little more than one round tonight before he ran into King Levinsky's right in what was to have been a ten round bout on the Riverview A. C. program.

Levinsky floored Dillon three times in the first round. Two of the knockdowns hardly were the result of punches. It seemed that Levinsky swung and the breeze did the work. But the first was legitimate. A looping right caught the Winnipeg 175 pounder on the jaw. He remained down for a nine count. His stay on the resin at other times during the opening three minutes was limited to eight and five counts.

Another Right Ends It.

To start the second, Levinsky shot over a right that didn't travel six inches. It landed behind Dillon's ear and the act was over. Less than 3,000 attended the show.

Ray Kizer, Tulsa 137 pounder, fought and danced until he nearly fell from exhaustion, but the best he could do against Frankie Hughes, Kenosha, was to earn an eight round judges' decision in the semi-windup.

Fontaine Stops Settle.

Referee Fred Andrews' action enabled Del Fontaine, Dillon's stablemate, to leave the ring with a four round technical knockout over Al Settle, a Negro middleweight, once of New York. Settle buckled under one of Fontaine's lefts, went down for four, arose and before he could continue Andrews halted the proceedings.

Favor Stack in U. S. Skate Meet Today

Oconomowoc, Wis., Jan. 30.—Chicago may become the home of the next national amateur skating champion. Frank Stack, THE TRIBUNE'S Milwaukee Silver Skates Derby winner, tonight was regarded as the outstanding contender for the title held by Allan Potts of New York in the two day meet on Fowler lake, commencing tomorrow.

Stack's ability and stamina are chief factors in his favor. The Amphion A. C. star today skimmed over the ice in championship style and said, afterwards, he didn't feel the effects of a recent illness which kept him out of the Silver Skates Derby in Chicago last week.

In addition to Stack and Potts, two other Chicagoans went for a trial spin. They were Eddie Schroeder of the Walton Arrow A. C., winner of the Silver Skates Derby at Chicago last Sunday, and Eddie Stundl, an intermediate expert. Detroit's star skaters, Eddie Wedge and Charles Delphier, also were out.

Three senior events will be decided tomorrow, the 440, the three-quarters mile, and the five mile. Intermediates will race in the 440 and three-quarter mile trials, juniors in the 440 and 880 and the juveniles in the 440. The senior championship will be decided on a basis of most points for seven events.

Herman Hoffman and Wallace Fee, both of Chicago, will be referee and starter.

NAVY APPROVES RIP MILLER AS FOOTBALL COACH

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 30.—[Special.]—The appointment of Edgar E. [Rip] Miller, formerly of Notre Dame and for four seasons line coach at the naval academy, as head football coach of the latter institution, was announced today. The appointment was approved this morning by Rear Admiral S. S. Robison, superintendent of the academy.

Calls Promotion by Garden Illegal.

Mr. Strotz and his directors previously had warned the New York corporation it would be enjoined from operating in Chicago under a subsidiary corporation. Last night Strotz wired Gen. John V. Clinnin, chairman of the Illinois athletic commission, five questions. In his telegram Mr. Strotz called attention to the activities of a member of the commission now in New York, emphasizing that Madison Square Garden has conducted negotiations with this member rather than the entire commission.

Stresses Charity Angle.

The Stadium president again pointed out that Chicago will be asked to contribute to a New York charity, and even if an arrangement is completed by which a Chicago charity will receive the funds, Madison Square Garden, a Stadium rival, will profit from the fight if the division of profits is the same as in the Schmeling-Sharkey fight last June.

His telegram follows:

"In view of the fact that Madison Square Garden is continuing its efforts to bring the Stribling-Schmeling fight into Chicago may I ask the commission the following questions:

"1. Is it true that the Illinois athletic commission is so interested in Madison Square Garden that one of its members is now in New York conferring with Garden officials?

"2. Why have officials of Madison Square Garden conducted negotiations for the proposed fight in Chicago through only one member of the Illinois commission? Why hasn't the entire commission been consulted?

"4. Is Chicago to be asked to contribute to New York's unemployed? What has New York done for Chicago's unemployed?

"5. Why hasn't Madison Square Garden emphasized that it received one-half of the profits in the Schmeling-Sharkey 'charity' bout?

[Signed] "SIDNEY N. STROTZ."

Mr. Strotz also wired Edward J. Kelly, president of the south park board of commissioners, last night:

"It is reported that Madison Square Garden still is endeavoring to promote a Schmeling-Stribling championship bout at Soldiers' field in June. What is your stand on the use of a Chicago memorial stadium under the guise of charity when the proceeds will go to a New York charity?"

Queries Law Firms.

Mr. Strotz said last night he had received the opinions of three law firms, separately arrived at and delivered, that under the Illinois boxing law it is impossible for the Garden or any other outside promoter to circumvent it without political favor or legislative concession.

"I have instructed the Stadium attorneys," Mr. Strotz continued, "to enjoin the commission from issuing a license to the New York corporation. I am reliably informed that Madison Square garden is preparing to form a new subsidiary corporation in Illinois. This is tantamount to admitting that the incorporation in 1927, which made possible a New York promotion of the Dempsey-Tunney fight, was illegal. At that time no objection was made. George Getz, now a member of the Illinois commission, technically was the promoter, although Tex Rickard was actually the director.

"I am told that the incorporators of the Garden in Illinois will be Patrick Joyce and Sheldon Clark of Chicago, and William Carey and William Saxe of New York. The Illinois law provides that a corporation in this state must be composed of men who have qualified with three years of residence. Carey and Saxe are resident voters in New York.

Will Chicago Benefit?

MT. CARMEL NIPS ST. IGNATIUS IN OVERTIME, 27-26

Lights Play Two Extra Periods to 16-16 Tie.

The south section of the Catholic league provided the excitement among local high school fans yesterday with three overtime games. Mount Carmel heavyweights took the lead in their division by defeating St. Ignatius on the latter's floor, 27 to 26. The Mount Carmel and St. Ignatius lightweights played two overtime periods, but couldn't come to a decision and the game ended in a 16-16 tie. Levaltt and Sawa featured. After Black's free throw had given the St. Ignatius heavyweights an edge in the extra period, Fitzgerald came through with the basket that brought Mount Carmel victory.

De La Salle of Chicago won an overtime battle from their Joliet namesakes, 23 to 20, on the winners' floor. The visiting lights evened the program with a 27 to 17 victory. Scully, Le Fevre, and Sullivan scored for the winning heavies in the extra period.

De Paul heavies continued their north section march by invading St. Patrick's gym for a 17 to 13 decision. The De Paul lights also won, 21 to 13.

St. Philip team journeyed to Weber's court for a double victory, the heavies winning, 38 to 16, and the lights, 22 to 15.

St. George heavies swamped St. Michael, 27 to 8, but the lights were pressed to take a 26 to 24 battle.

Leo heavies kept pace in the south section with a 25 to 19 win over St. Rita on the latter's floor, but the home lights divided the program by winning, 32 to 22.

evening several years ago. Among those present were Congressman Moran, the chairman of the house military affairs committee, and five young football players, three of whom went to the military academy soon afterward and two of whom became captains of the football team. These two were Tiny Hewitt and Harry Wilson. Of course it was the congressman's duty to interest himself in appointments of worthwhile young men to the military academy, but the fact that this group of young men all happened to be good football players lent unusual interest to the gathering.

Pegler Fears He Erred.

I hope I did no wrong, but I am afraid I did when I called the attention of the football establishment at the military academy to a young football player who was then playing somewhat at a Western conference school, but wished to go to West Point. However, I could do no more than obtain a copy of the law governing appointments, which I sent him, and a list of the congressmen in his part of the country who still had unused appointments for the year.

The rules regarding the applicant's residence do not seem to be interpreted as strictly as some other rules and I discovered that by establishing a formal residence, something like a Reno divorce residence, in a congressman's district, the applicant complies with the law. Something of the kind was suggested to young Kenneth Goff of Rhode Island State college, whose desire to become a cadet, and presumably an officer, is the cause of the present renewal of the row.

My own proselyte never arrived at West Point, but under the definition of proselyting I am afraid I never can run for alderman. It was clearly an act of turpitude.

Becoming Too Sensitive.

The military academy is becoming too sensitive to the opinion of civil schools, but as Congressman Fish lives near West Point the officers have an uneasy feeling that he is always trying to get something on them. By constant inquiry and surveillance it is possible to get something on anybody with the notable exception of Alphone Capone, who must have led a blameless life to come this far unconvicted under such searching scrutiny.

Approach almost any man and say, "Did you get out of that little trouble all right?" and he will be very likely to run a high color and reply, "Yes, but please don't say anything about it." So Congressman Fish's hostile gaze makes the West Point officers nervous and it will be a pleasant day for them when he is defeated and they can tell the sentries to keep him out.

It is consistent with the purpose of the military academy to nod to good football players, because army officers should be of the best physical type. If the boys then turn out to be too dumb to make good officers they are automatically ejected in the process of examinations.

HEAVYWEIGHTS GROW BIGGER—IF NOT BETTER

Jose Soares Santa, giant Portuguese heavyweight, will arrive today for his Chicago debut in the Stadium next Wednesday night.

Santa will meet Knute Hansen, the melancholy Dane from Racine, Wis., in one of four featured ten round bouts. Tony Canzoneri, lightweight champion, meets Goldie Hess; Larry Johnson, the coal comet, is matched with Marty Gallagher, Washington, D. C., and Georgie Nate will meet Kid Francis, Parisian, who conquered Fidel La Barba.

Standing six feet nine inches in his stocking feet, Santa has been dubbed the Portuguese Poplar. He is bigger than Carnera in every respect save one—his feet are practically normal, whereas Carnera's are size 14.

José wears what is probably the largest hat in the world. It is a size 13. He is proud of the fact that his "head is bigger normally than Carnera's is expanded."

Wield Duster in Cub Office; Boss Due Back

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

There's been dust on the desks and chairs at the Cub office for the last month, but there'll be business as usual starting today. President William Veeck is due back from his California tour which, except for the signing of a few players who live out that way, was chiefly a matter of golf on William Wrigley's privately owned Catalina island.

About the first thing Veeck will attempt to dispose of after becoming reacquainted with the office force will be that contract of Hack Wilson's. This detail will be taken up almost immediately, possibly somewhere in the east. Veeck also is to have a final talk with Manager Hornsby, who hopes to leave for the coast within a few days.

Most of the big league clubs which so far have displayed enough energy to supply the baseball writers with the usual spring statistics on players are not going to waste money taking messenger boys to the training camps. The law allows 40 men, but the Giants are the only club up to the limit. Connie Mack has 39, eighteen of whom are pitchers. The St. Louis Browns have only 27 and the St. Louis Cardinals 28. The White Sox are taking 36, but three of them are not regularly enrolled.

* * *

The officials of the Boston Braves evidently hope to build Wallie Berger into a real home run attraction. A 15 foot screen which stood on the fence in front of the left field bleacher at the Braves' park has been taken down. This what formerly was a two base hit, if the batter hurried, will be a homer.

* * *

An idea of how much chance there is for the White Sox to make a deal in their own league for an experienced infielder in exchange for Willie Kamm can be gained from the fact that both Owner Comiskey and Business Manager Grabiner have gone to California.

GEN. MOTORS AND PARAMOUNT EARN DIVIDENDS

Show Ability to Ride Out Depression.

BY O. A. MATHER.

The ability of the leading concerns in the major industries to earn their dividends even in periods of severe depression was again demonstrated yesterday. The General Motors corporation, in the automobile industry, and the Paramount-Publix corporation, in the motion picture field, joined this favored class.

Although General Motors has not yet issued its formal report for the final quarter of 1930 and the full year, its earnings may be accurately computed from the annual report of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., which holds 22.94 per cent of General Motors common stock outstanding.

The Du Pont report indicates that General Motors net earnings for 1930 were equivalent to $3.17 a share on its common stock, including a nonrecurring profit of 19 cents a share from the sale of common stock to the General Motors Management corporation.

Thus, it is evident that General Motor covered its $3 annual dividend by a slight margin. Indicated earnings for the final quarter of last year are about 32 cents a share, compared with 53 cents a share in the final quarter of 1929. Net earnings for all of 1929 were equivalent to $5.44 a share.

Has Best Income in History.

The Paramount-Publix corporation made a remarkable showing in its preliminary report. It disclosed the largest earnings in its history in spite of the general depression. Net profits for 1930 were officially estimated at $18,370,000, equivalent to $6.15 a share on 2,986,829 shares of stock, which was the average number outstanding last year. The net profit was 18 per cent ahead of $15,544,000 earned in 1929, which was equivalent to $6.36 a share on a smaller number of shares.

It is shown that earnings last year were more than 50 per cent larger than dividend requirements, which are $4 a year on the capital stock. Dividends paid last year totaled about $12,100,000, and thereafter about $6,200,000 was added to surplus. Earnings for the final quarter of 1930 were approximately $4,825,000, or $1.55 a share, compared with $5,813,000, or $2.16 a share in the last quarter of 1929.

"The program for unifying the operations of our theater interests, which was put into effect during the last year and is now beginning to show its results in our earnings, make the prospect for 1931 distinctly encouraging," President Adolph Zukor said.

Find Slow Improvement.

Another week of slow improvement in trade and industry is noted in the mercantile reviews appearing yesterday.

"While buying has been slow, it is making better progress and in some instances orders are running in excess of a year ago," Dun's Review says. "Price reductions in wholesale markets are growing less frequent and continued marking down of merchandise by retailers helps to attract a better response to their offerings. Prices are firmer and are expected to be advanced in some lines.

"Of the business news in recent weeks, the most favorable is the return to work of a large number of men in the automobile plants. Another favorable point is the increase in steel operations."

Some improvement in the shoe manufacturing trade and in the cotton textile and furniture industries is noted in Bradstreet's review. Another encouraging factor is the decline in business failures, which this week numbered 660, compared with 712 last week and 545 a year ago.

Residential building is showing signs of improvement after being in the doldrums for a long time, according to the Standard Statistics company. Construction of single and two family houses and subdivision developments are showing particular activity.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 30.—(AP)—What were described as new causes for the national depression, including bad bank management, careless chartering of banks with small capital, the capital gains tax, and the rivalry between national and state financial institutions were outlined today before the senate banking investigating committee.

George W. Davison, president of the Central Hanover Bank and Trust company of New York, held these factors, coupled with undue speculation and the transfer of business from rural to larger banks in commercial centers due to improved roads and automobiles, were largely responsible for existing conditions.

More coöperation was needed, he said, rather than changes in the banking laws. He said he believed bad management could not be corrected by legislation, and that endowing the controller of the currency with authority to remove national bank officers for inefficiency or mismanagement would indicate to the public that something was wrong and start runs on banks.

Charles E. Mitchell, chairman of the board of the National City bank of New York, was asked to appear on Monday.

Davison attributed many of the recent bank failures to bad management, but said a great difficulty was with the "supervising examining authority in determining how to correct abuses when he finds them."

He recommended repeal of the capital gains tax, holding it one of the primary causes for the "tremendous rise in security prices" in 1929. Rather than pay the tax, he said, persons held on to their securities and created a "sort of corner" in security stocks, with a consequent aggravation of the inflation.

Bank security affiliates should not be abolished, he said, but placed under simultaneous examination with the banks and prevented from dealing in their own stocks.

An example of the "abuse" of affiliates, he said, was the failure of the Bank of the United States, New York state institution. He agreed "bootleg loans" were bad, but said he knew of no way to control them. He expressed the opinion the federal reserve rediscount rate should not as a rule be used to curb speculation, but said if such use had been made of it in 1929 it might have stopped the "inordinate rise of all prices and thereby contributed to stabilization."

AUTO MAKERS PLAN TO SPEED UP PRODUCTION

General Motors corporation's Oldsmobile division will increase its production schedule for February by 30 per cent in response to favorable sales reports, it was announced yesterday.

J. T. Collins, general sales manager, said reports received from all parts of the country "verify our conclusion that this sales impetus is no flash created by the stimulus of automobile show enthusiasm. We firmly believe it is indicative of a substantial upturn in business conditions."

Graham-Paige Motors corporation has increased production schedules and taken on more employés as a result of stimulus given the motor industry by the automobile shows. A total of 2,130 workers now are employed at the main factory in Detroit and the body plant at Wayne, Mich., an increase of 400 this month. In addition 125 men were added at the body plant at Evansville, Ind.

Registrations for December of leading makes of new automobiles in the first 44 states to be heard from totaled 76,304, a decline of 31 per cent from December of 1929. The Chevrolet and Cadillac divisions of General Motors were the only ones showing gains over 1929. The former showed a large gain as the result of an early introduction of new models.

EXPECT STEEL CO. PURCHASE BY BETHLEHEM

New York, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Wall street now looks for an early announcement of the proposed acquisition of McClintic-Marshall company by Bethlehem Steel corporation, and understands that Bethlehem is also considering the acquisition of several smaller fabricators of structural steel.

McClintic-Marshall, as a structural steel maker, is exceeded only by American Bridge company, subsidiary of U. S. Steel. Other companies mentioned in connection with Bethlehem including Levering and Garrigues, Hay Foundry and Iron company, Harris Structural Steel company, and Bethlehem Fabricators, Inc.

AGREE ON NEW SETTLEMENT OF MEXICAN DEBT

Silver Fall Impairs Capacity to Pay.

New York, Jan. 30.—(AP)—A new agreement for settlement of the Mexican debt was signed today to permit postponement of gold payments for two years, because of the sharp shrinkage in the price of silver, which has impaired Mexico's capacity to pay.

Other features of the latest plan for settlement of the long standing debt, amounting to approximately $700,000,000 agreed upon July 25, 1930, were retained in the new agreement signed today by Monte de Oca, Mexican minister of finance, and Thomas W. Lamont, chairman of the International Committee of Bankers on Mexico.

The agreement, made public by Mr. Lamont, is subject to the approval of the Mexican federal congress and the bondholders. The former agreement had not been acted upon by the congress and the bankers' committee has been advised that the government intends to call a special session of congress late this winter or in the early spring for the purpose of considering the new agreement. The old pact was declared ineffective by the Mexican government following the drop in silver prices.

Cannot Pay in Gold.

Mr. Lamont said that since the original agreement was signed the value of the Mexican silver peso has declined to such an extent that the government, whose revenues are received largely in silver, stated its capacity to pay in gold has decreased so greatly it cannot possibly provide the amount of gold called for under the agreement within the limit of its budget revenue.

Under the July 25 agreement the rate of exchange was fixed at 45.25 American cents per peso, which was the prevailing rate then. Since that time the peso has suffered a precipitate drop with the fall in the price of silver. It is now quoted around 41.19.

The bankers' committee recognized this situation and agreed to insertion of a new clause in the agreement, much like the moratorium provisions of the Young plan, under which the Mexican government will be permitted to postpone the necessity of gold payments on its indebtedness for a period not to exceed two years.

"In other words," Mr. Lamont explained, "the active operation of the plan so far as gold receipts from the government and gold disbursements to bondholders are concerned, will be suspended for a period not to exceed two years from Jan. 1, 1931.

"Meanwhile the Mexican government will, under the terms of the new agreement, pay to the committee in silver pesos the equivalent of the payments scheduled for 1931 and 1932 the total amount of $25,500,000 United States gold as provided in the agreement of July 25, including the $5,000,000 previously deposited under the agreement, which will be converted into silver for such purpose.

Will Deposit Silver.

"The silver will be lodged in a responsible depository in Mexico City; in the event that within the next two year period the exchange situation permits the conversion of the silver fund into gold and the transfer of the proceeds thereof to the committee in New York, this plan will be followed.

"In any event, however, the government holds itself responsible to the committee to see to it that at the end of the two year period the full amount originally named—$25,500,000—shall be remitted for the benefit of the bondholders.

"Inasmuch as under the new agreement it may be possible to make no gold disbursements to the bondholders until the conclusion of the two year period, the committee will not call for nor accept deposit of bonds immediately, nor until such time as it is made manifest that disbursements to the bondholders can be started within a reasonable time."

It was pointed out by bankers that the two year moratorium gives the Mexican government an opportunity to adjust its budget to any permanent change in the value of silver pesos.

Make Large Concessions.

In the agreement bondholders would make large concessions through reduction of the amounts due for arrears on interest, extending the term of payment to 45 years and in other ways. Principal of government bonds outstanding amount to $473,000,000 and interest due totals $396,000,000. In addition there is a debt of the national railways of $239,000,000 with accrued interest due of $171,000,000, which is also covered by the agreement.

Negotiations were carried on in New York for the Mexican government by Roberto Casas Alatriste and Francisco Valladares, special delegates, with members of the bankers' committee which represents the United States and leading European nations.

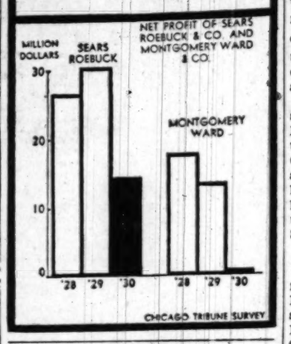
EARNINGS OF MAIL ORDER HOUSES FOR THREE YEARS ARE COMPARED



SOUTH DAKOTA SUPREME COURT HITS GUARANTEE

Declares Bank Fund Proves Failure.

Pierre, S. D., Jan. 30.—(AP)—South Dakota's Supreme court today condemned as a failure the attempt, started 15 years ago, to guarantee depositors against losses through failure of state banks.

Declaring that experiments with "bank guaranty funds" have failed completely in South Dakota and other states, the court held that depositors have no hope for substantial repayment of losses, estimated at more than $45,000,000, from bank failures in the post-war depression.

Refuses to Direct Assessments.

The court's decision ruled against an attempt to declare invalid the repeal in 1927 of the original bank guarantee law, passed in 1915. It refused to direct that annual assessments should be made against the 235 state banks now operating so as to provide funds for the payment to depositors of the money they lost since 1915 in bank failures.

Partial payment of claims, however, was ordered from the million dollars now held in the old guarantee fund, which the court held was in effect insolvent.

Approves Amended Law.

Approval was given the amended guaranty law, passed in 1927, which set up an individual fund for each state bank but stopped the old method of making sound institutions pay for losses incurred by state banks. The constitutionality of this law was upheld.

The controversy over the bank guaranty attempts culminated in the attempt, started fifteen months ago, to declare unconstitutional the present law and reinstate the original system of assessments into a pooled fund from which deposits would be paid when banks failed.

The final total loss to depositors, which the court held cannot be repaid, has been estimated at nearly $25,000,000.

Day Coach Passenger Fares on 8 Roads Cut to 2c a Mile

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 30.—(AP)—A two cent coach fare will go into effect on the Frisco railroad system in nine southwestern states tomorrow night and on seven other railroads between points where they compete with the Frisco.

The reduction from 3.6 to 2 cents a mile was designed by the Frisco management to meet motor bus and private automobile competition, which has been making serious inroads on its passenger business. Frisco officials also said the cut was the "railroad's contribution toward bringing business improveme..t." The other roads making rate cuts are the Missouri Pacific, Missouri-Kansas-Texas [Katy], the Cotton Belt, Rock Island, Santa Fé, Kansas City Southern, and Illinois Central.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 30.—Consummation of the sale of assets of Pathe Exchange, Inc., to Radio-Keith-Orpheum corporation was announced today by Hiram S. Brown, president of the latter.

The deal previously was approved by a majority of Pathe stockholders, but various suits had been brought to halt the transfer. These legal actions, it was reported today, were withdrawn following a long conference last night.

Pathe Exchange, Inc., retains its 49 per cent interest in Du Pont Pathe Film Manufacturing company, but sells its studios and other principal assets to R.-K.-O. for $4,669,789.

Mr. Brown issued the following statement concerning plans for operation of Pathe properties:

"It is intended to operate two distinct and separate motion picture producing and distributing organizations —one the present RKO-Radio Pictures corporation and the other a separate company to continue the operations of the present Pathe studio and Pathe branch offices in this country and abroad.

"A separate production organization will be maintained in the Pathe studio in Culver City, Cal., which will function independently of the Radio Pictures studio.

"In the sale and distribution of Pather pictures the present Pathe branch offices, manned by the Pathe personnel, will continue to function as a separate selling and distributing organization. There will be an independent home office for the new company in New York City at its present headquarters. While the full name of the new operating company has not been definitely determined, the word Pathe will be maintained in its corporate title."

City's Suburbs Prominent Centers of Retail Trade

BY SCRUTATOR.

Chicago suburbs are important centers of retail trade. Figures released for publication today by the bureau of the census show that, per capita, they spend in the retail outlets of their own communities from $380 to $500 annually.

Thus, Wilmette, population 15,223, spends five and half millions a year; Harvey, population 16,374, goes past the $7,800,000 mark; Oak Park, with 63,982 residents, expends 31½ millions at home; La Grange, with 10,103 inhabitants, has local sales of 5½ millions, and Melrose Park, with 10,741, trades at home to the extent of $3,800,000.

Food Group Ranks First.

In each of these communities the food group comes first in total sales. In each the automotive business ranks second. It is rather remarkable that Harvey, Wilmette, La Grange, and Oak Park each spend at home for food about the same amount per capita. Melrose Park's eating is not so expensive, on the basis of the home sales, although the uniformity in the other four suggests that Melrose Parkers may be purchasing more of their supplies in neighboring towns.

Some interest may attach to the fact that sales of automotive products, cars, accessories, tires ,fuel and services, are nearly as large in several of the suburbs as expenditures for food. In La Grange auto expense is 20 per cent less than alimentary; in Oak Park the difference is slightly smaller; in Melrose Park it is scarcely half; in Harvey it exceeds 60 per cent, while Wilmette for some reason or other does its trading for its automobiles outside the home area. It has an automotive business less than 25 per cent of its foodstuff outgo.

In at least one outside city in Illinois, Ottawa, the sale of automotive products is larger than that of foodstuffs. In another, Moline, the difference in dollar totals is less than 5 per cent. It may also be pointed out that Moline has a smaller sale of food products per capita than four of the five Chicago suburbs, and that Ottawa, despite the supposition that it will have markets outside that are not usually enjoyed by suburban merchants, just about averages up with the towns near Chicago.

Important Pay Rolls, Too.

Important pay rolls go along with retail establishments in these suburbs. Harvey's retailers dispense nearly $800,000 to employés each year; Wilmette's, $720,000; La Grange's, $581,000; Oak Park's, 4½ millions, and Melrose Park's, $420,000.

The fact that these communities are suburbs does not detract from the further fact that they are rather important retail centers, even though they may have to take only the customers from their own territory. There seems to be a close relationship between the amount of food bought in one town and in the other. Standards of living, so far as primary necessities like food and automobiles are concerned, are not markedly different. It is an interesting thought that the same food advertisement that is effective in Wilmette is just as important in Harvey or Oak Park.

Perhaps, such assumptions are based on poor perception. It should be remembered, too, that were taken in 1929 and the population returns in 1930.

O'CONNOR CONFIDENT OF MARKETING COUNTY HIGHWAY WARRANTS

Even though the Foreman bank, which handles the county funds, has given notice to Assistant Deputy Comptroller Michael J. O'Connor that it will refuse to buy $800,000 of 1930 county highway fund levy tax anticipation warrants, county commissioners yesterday were assured by O'Connor that he was certain of marketing the warrants in New York and Detroit if not in Chicago. The funds are needed for overdue highway construction jobs, and will, the deputy comptroller said, put 1,500 men to work.

It was pointed out by O'Connor to the county board finance committee that the warrant is gilt edged, since the aggregate sold would be less than half the tax collections even with a 20 per cent loss and cost deducted. Authorization to advertise the sale of the warrant was granted to the deputy comptroller, who said he would advertise both in New York and Detroit as well as in local papers. Other city banks beside the Foreman refused the warrant.

Highway warrants now outstanding against the 1930 levy total $2,196,000. Sale of the $800,000 warrant would bring it up to $2,996,000, and accrued interest by January, 1932, when the levy is collected, to $3,122,000. The net highway tax yield after loss and cost, based on the 12½ cent highway tax rate, would be $1,188,000 in excess of the aggregate of tax warrants and accrued interest, it is estimated by the comptroller's office.

WILBUR FAVORS LIMITATION OF OIL IMPORTS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 30.—(AP)—The drive of the independent oil producers for a limitation on foreign oil imports gained support today from Secretary Wilbur.

In a letter to the senate commerce committee, the interior secretary said:

"It seems to me that the evident need is proration of imports under the guidance of some fact finding body, such as the federal trade commission."

Indorsement of the American Federation of Labor and of the railroad brotherhoods for a legislative wall against the flow of oil from abroad were heard by the commerce committee. Ralph Arnold, engineer, of Los Angeles, told he believed there was enough oil in this country to meet the nation's needs for 500 years at the rate of the present consumption of 1,000,000,000 barrels annually.

Chairman Johnson of the commerce committee, read the letter of Secretary Wilbur. The secretary declined to comment on the proposal of Senator Shortridge [Rep., Cal.] for a tariff of $1 a barrel on crude oil imports. He said this was outside his jurisdiction.

Would Establish Rules.

Independence, Kas., Jan. 30.—(AP)—Thurman Hill, Independence lawyer, has prepared a petition for filing today asking the Kansas public service commission to establish rules to prevent "unjust and preferential practices of large oil companies" operating in the state.

The document, drawn up in behalf of J. Edward Jones, head of the Petroleum Rights corporation of New York, seeks among other things discontinuance of the proration plan in the industry, alleging that the system and the efforts of major oil companies to control the production and marketing of oil in the state is resulting in an annual loss of $50,000,000 to the independent oil men and $10,000,000 to lease holders.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 30.—(AP)—Coke production in the United States dropped 19.3 per cent last year. The bureau of mines today announced the total output of coke in the country in 1930 as 48,310,308 net tons. Beehive coke represented 2,795,800 tons of the total, reaching the lowest figure since 1880.

Cudahy Packing.

Will you kindly advise me if Cudahy Packing stock is a good and safe buy at the present time? Enclosed please find stamped envelope for reply. Thank you for this courtesy.—W. H. H.

Cudahy Packing company is one of the few concerns that showed increased profits last year over the preceding year. These results, in the face of substantially lower dollar sales, were due to good control of operating expenses and also to the fact that the company had been making preparation for more than two years for a possible period of general business depression.

The fiscal year ends Nov. 1. Last year sales were $231,407,035, compared with $267,360,185 in 1929. Expenses were $225,221,981, against $261,912,339 the year before.

Last year, after provision for depreciation, federal taxes and fixed charges, there was a balance of $2,930,318 available for dividends. This net profit was 5.07 times interest requirements on 20,000 shares of 6 per cent preferred and 65,505 shares of 7 per cent preferred, both $100 par, and was equal to $5.03 per share earned on the 467,489 common shares [par $50]. In 1929 net profit was $2,512,850, equal after preferred dividends to $4.14 per common share.

Cudahy Packing company is one of the "big four" packers. About 10 per cent of its products consist of soap, glue, fertilizer, hides, wool, etc. The rest is meat and by-products. Ten main plants and a hundred branches are operating throughout the country.

Although this company has not been involved in the present litigation resulting in a partial modification of the packers' consent decree to permit distribution at wholesale of unrelated food products, it may find this added freedom to engage in the wholesale grocery business advantageous.

During 1930 the company improved its financial position by reducing the amount of notes payable from $14,370,287 to $7,965,500. Funded debt was reduced from $20,591,000 to $19,840,000.

As of Nov. 1, 1930, current assets were $34,026,845, and current liabilities were $10,211,227.

Earnings in the past have varied widely. After the war there was a downward trend culminating in a deficit in 1921. Recovery was steady in the next five years. Net income in 1926 was $4,052,780. The following year net was $2,353,959 and in 1928 it was $2,567,327.

Dividends on the common have been $4 per year since the first quarter of 1927. The stock deserves a fairly good rating.

New York, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Receivers for the Seaboard Air Line railway announced today that they will be unable to pay either the principal or interest on the 5 per cent secured notes or interest on the first mortgage bonds of the Seaboard All Florida railway, a subsidiary, due Feb. 1.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 30.—Fireworks displays by a group of closely held specialties, including Auburn Auto, Worthington Pump, Vanadium, Columbian Carbon, Foster Wheeler and Lambert, enlivened today's stock market. The harassed shorts in these issues were raked over the coals with no mercy and their writhings were reflected in price upturns amounting to more than 3 points in the extreme before the torture was over.

The market as a whole advanced moderately, thanks to several favorable new developments, including the drop in brokers' loans, the Bethlehem Steel statement and predictions of a better report by Radio Corporation of America than had been anticipated. An improved technical position of the list also helped.

Turnover Is Heavier.

The turnover was heavier than it has been in some time, topping the 2,000,000 share mark.

Auburn was in the spotlight all day. This issue, which only a month or so ago hit a bottom of 60¾ on a decline tapering from its 1930 high of 263¾, shot up to 148, a gain of 8¾ points, at one stage of today's trading. It began to react in the early afternoon, however, and by closing time was back to 142. This gave it a net gain for the day of 2¾ points—on top of a long string of similar or better gains in the last week or so.

Radio Corporation was more active than it has been in some time and the street heard that the old crowd which made history in that stock during the long bull market was back at it again. According to this report these operators had taken stock of the situation marketwise in the shares of the oil line corporation and, finding the short position rather crowded, had proceeded to prod the bears a bit—on the strength of the earnings predictions.

Worthington Pump.

The same crowd was also credited with much of the day's activity in Worthington Pump. Operations in this issue found some basis in the action of the company in clearing off its preferred dividend arrears and thus paving the way for common dividends as and when warranted. The stock closed at 81¾, up 5¾ points on the day after being some 3 points higher.

The pivotals group just about held steady.

Stocks prominent in the advance, but which held close to their line of communications included Montgomery Ward, frequently mentioned of late in brokerage house advances; Du Pont, on publication of what was considered a satisfactory earnings statement; Fox, and Loew's.

Rails More Quiet.

The rails were generally neglected, but the merger transactions in this lately buoyant group were at fractional advances for the most part. The drop of 30 per cent in net income for December as compared with the previous year was not particularly relished by those who have been getting themselves steamed up over the carriers.

Stone & Webster was a weak spot in the utilities group, selling off nearly 3 points. Western Union dropped 1½. Another weak issue was Ingersoll Rand, which dropped 4¾ points to 169, the lowest it has sold for a long time.

LOOKING AHEAD WITH BUSINESS

Despite a weak statistical position due to the fact that inventories at the end of Dec. 31, 1930, were at a record peak, the price structure in the newsprint paper industry has not suffered, and no early change is indicated, says Standard Statistics company. The demand is nearly 20 per cent below a year ago and the company forecasts no new improvement during the first quarter. Current production is only slightly below shipments.

Nineteen thirty was a record year for the Ethyl Gasoline corporation, owned jointly by the Standard Oil company of New Jersey and the General Motors corporation. Sales aggregated nearly 2,000,000,000 gallons, a gain of 48 per cent over 1929, it is announced.

General Foods corporation announced formation of Dunlop Milling company, a new subsidiary which has purchased the name, brands, trademarks, and physical properties of Dunlop Milling company at Clarksville, Tenn. The Dunlop plant, which has been closed for the last few weeks, will resume operations under the new ownership next week.

Reflecting the glutted condition of the money market in January, the average renewal rate for call money for the month was 1.71 per cent, against 2.16 per cent in December and 4.74 per cent in the first month of 1930. The high of the month was 3 per cent, but since Jan. 5 both renewal rate and the rate on new loans have held stationary at 1½ per cent.

"Cash currently on hand together with marketable securities now held will be ample for payment of semi-annual interest charges of $883,965 due May 1 next on our 5 per cent general mortgage gold bonds," said T. C. O'Neal, president of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railway. "This and other interest requirements due in the spring have already been provided for through our established financial program.

Stockholders of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. numbered 34,643 at the end of 1930, an increase of 9,172, or 36 per cent.

The Mid-West States Utilities company showed an increase of 213 per cent in the number of its stockholders in the past twelve months.

Hogs recovered all of the loss recorded on Thursday's market when supplies fell short and eastern demand broadened yesterday. The extreme top and general average prices were the same as Wednesday's top and average at $8.10 and $7.45, respectively. Cattle lost Thursday's strength, while buyers also succeeded in reversing the trend of the lamb market.

The rally in the hog market yesterday brought the average price up 15c, but the market, as a whole, is still 25@50c under the high point of last week. Light weights scored the sharpest advances, while medium and weighty stock finished only 5@10c above the previous session.

However, only 2,000 were left at the close. Outsiders bought 11,000. About half of the 30,000 received were billed direct to packers from other points, and only 26,500 are expected at five markets today, against 37,400 last Saturday.

March Hogs Bring $8.75.

Light weight hogs for delivery during the last half of March were sold at $8.75 on the futures market yesterday. February light were being offered at $8.25 and April light at $9.00. On the "to arrive" market, light weights for next Monday were offered at $8.10 and bid $8.00.

The meager supply of 2,000 cattle unloaded at Chicago yesterday was hardly large enough to establish a fair list of quotations in all branches of the trade. Yet available supplies exceeded the requirements of the trade, the outlet being the narrowest in months, even at a reduction in prices.

The market as a whole is at a new low point, but not low enough to stimulate consumption, according to buying interests. Quality was lacking yesterday and few sales were made above $9.00, the best available going at $9.75. Bulk of steers brought only $7.50@8.75. Cows and heifers shared in the weakness. Calves were slow at the recent break.

Lambs Swing Downward.

The upward swing of the lamb market lost momentum in midweek, after touching a new high mark for the season, and buyers succeeded in pressing quotations down 15@25c on yesterday's session when supplies slightly exceeded requirements. The top came down 20c at $9.40, paid by all interests, while many of the good grades sold for local slaughter at $9.25@9.35.

Some 105 lb averages on the yearling order brought $8.00. Aged sheep and yearlings were scarce and unchanged. Feeding and shearing lambs were in demand at $8.00@8.50.

Receipts at Chicago for today are estimated at 500 cattle, 15,000 hogs and 4,000 sheep, against 345 cattle, 20,831 hogs and 2,513 sheep on the previous Saturday and 196 cattle, 15,799 hogs and 4,434 sheep a year ago.

Probable receipts of hogs at Chicago for next Monday are estimated from 53,000 to 78,000. F. Knutzen marked 53,000; H. S. Turner and F. W. Young, 60,000; C. Southwick and H. Pattison, 62,000; G. W. Chandler, 64,000; E. S. Waterbury, R. B. Ellis and M. J. Berkery, 65,000; A. G. Welhener and G. McLain, 67,000; G. Brittain, 69,000; F. M. Sherwood, 70,000; J. M. Waters, 73,000; S. Lund and H. Wolfe, 75,000, and W. F. Russell, 78,000.

Says Canada Rys. Will Cut Cattle Freight Rates 50%

WINNIPEG, Jan. 30—(AP)—Robert Weir, dominion minister of agriculture, announced today that a 50 per cent reduction in freight rates on cattle sent from ranches to feed farms had been promised by railways. When feeding is finished, cattle will be shipped on a direct export rate from farms to the old country, he said. A saving of $50 a carload will be made by cattlemen with commercial yards and stockyard charges of from $17 to $25 a carload eliminated, Weir said.

EASY UNDERTONE IS PREVAILING IN CORN MARKET

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

An easier undertone prevailed in the corn market yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade. The strong rally of Thursday weakened the technical position and some of the locals who covered short lines the previous day were active in reinstating them.

At no time was there aggressive buying and the finish was within a fraction of the bottom with net losses of 1@1¼c. March closed at 62¾c; May, 64@64¼c; July 65@65⅛c, and September, 64⅝@65c.

Buying against bids checked the decline in corn. At the inside prices were within a fraction of the lowest figures of the season. The selling was induced by a belief the movement of cash corn was to increase while the shipping demand here was generally slow with sales of 33,000 bu. However, Kansas City reported a broadening demand with shipments being made to all sections in that territory.

Hog Supplies Liberal.

Despite the fact that the drought hit part of the main corn belt, there is practically no difference in the supply of hogs in the eleven surplus corn states as compared with last year. In Iowa, where the corn crop was 70,000,000 bu less than in 1929, the number of hogs is about 500,000 head in excess of a year ago, and the heavy weight of arrivals here the last month suggests to some observers that corn is being fed on a large scale. Reports to the Iowa department of agriculture indicate that only 7 per cent of the crop of that state will be shipped out of the country where grown, compared with a normal of 15 per cent.

Argentine continues to export corn on a large scale, shipments the last week aggregating 6,127,000 bu. Included in the latter was 24,000 bu to the United States and 146,000 bu to Canada, making nearly 200,000 bu shipped to the latter in the last two weeks. Buenos Aires futures closed ⅝c lower with February and March quoted at 28⅝c.

Wheat Eases with Corn.

Technical position of July wheat was weakened by the sharp upturn on Thursday. When corn started downward support was lacking and the prices dropped 1¾c from the early high with the finish at 66⅜@66¼c with a net loss of ⅝c. Old crop months were unchanged to ¼c lower with March 79¼c and May, 81⅛@81⅝c.

There was some buying at one time on the Modern Miller's report showing that dry weather prevailed over the greater part of the winter and spring wheat belt. In contrast to the conditions prevailing in North America, J. S. Bache & Co. had a cable from Paris estimating that the French and Belgian crops had been damaged 20 per cent by the excessive rains during the last two months. Consumption of bread in Holland, according to reports to the department of commerce has been reduced 20 to 30 per cent as compared with what it was before the war.

Estimates on the amount of Canadian wheat sold for export during the last week or ten days vary greatly, but in some quarters it is felt that sales of late have probably aggregated between 9,000,000 and 10,000,000 bu. Estimates on yesterday's business ranged from 250,000 to 1,500,000 bu. Winnipeg was firm early, but eased later with Chicago and closed ¼@⅝c lower. Early there was buying regarded as for outsiders. Buenos Aires was easy and closed ⅞c lower, while Liverpool was ⅛@⅜c higher, and is holding around the lowest figures of the season. Argentine and Australia put 8,926,000 bu wheat afloat during the last week which had a depressing effect on Liverpool.

The trade ignored a Broomhall cable indicating that the British government was contemplating a quota system compelling mills to use a certain amount of native and British empire wheat in their grind.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Traders see nothing in the position of the grain markets at present to induce extended commitments on either side. The trade is uneasy and every rumor tending to deprecate the farm board's actions induces moderate selling by speculators. An unconfirmed rumor at the last that Chairman Legge had resigned, which was later denied, however, led to selling of futures and buying of bids on wheat. March wheat at the close was within ¼c of the government's pegged price and May ⅛@⅜c, being 79c and 81c, respectively.

Traders look upon the large export sales of wheat as the main cause for the strength in Winnipeg of late. Those who take the estimated surplus compared with the export sales say it will take a long time for Canada to move its surplus.

A farmer of Tolono, Ill., writes THE TRIBUNE that at the time oats were being harvested the corn crop and all live stock feed was burning up. The oats were heavy and fine feeding quality. This condition caused the farmers to put away every bushel of oats. These oats are being fed to save the corn and will never show up. He says he is not wheat that is being fed, as a corn farmer markets his wheat from the field.

Minneapolis is to have a corn futures market beginning Feb. 2. A vote on the chamber of commerce has been on for a week and it ended yesterday with its adoption by 280 votes, with only 2 votes against it.

COFFEE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Reports that the Brazilian government had decided to put a warehouse coffee and levy a duty on new trees to check production appeared to be without much effect on the futures market here today, but while trading was active the tone was generally steady.
